Uncle Sam Kills Rats. A Lady Would Fight. California's Peaches. Russia Seems in Earnest.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

THE Government bureau of biological survey helped Greensburg, N. C., to rid its business district of rats. The rats, thousands of them, in the basement of one drug store, were killed by a poison called "Squill" mixed with ground fresh mackerel.

Squill, a bulb that grows wild along the Mediterranean sea, kills rats and doesn't hurt humans or domestic animals. Providence seems to have made that poison especially for rats.

This part is interesting. The first "rat baits" were laid down where the rats would find it without any poison in it. That inspired confidence. Other baits, with squill, were laid, 11,000 of them. The rats ate, and passed on. That's the plan of get-rich-quick schemers. They let victims make a little "easy" money first. Then the other thing happens.

Mrs. Bobby Burns, widow lady of Baltimore, learned boxing from her late husband, and asks the State athletic commission to let her enter the prize ring and fight for the gate money.

Mrs. Burns has fought in private fights, and the boxing commission, it is reported, will examine her physically to make sure that she is fit to fight.

Somebody else ought to examine the public, and make sure that it is fit to watch women in the prize ring. Such a spectacle would help to terminate legalized prize fight brutality.

It is not likely that Maryland, which respects women, will permit female prize fighters.

The farm relief commission might investigate California's peach crop problem. The State produced last year over 600,000 tons of fine peaches. One-third of the crop was wasted on the ground before the canneries, on whom growers depend, decided to offer a price.

Now, within a week of picking, the canneries have set no price, and growers do not know where they stand. They want $80 a ton, four cents a pound, for the finest fruit. Canners call that price prohibitive.

Why not help growers do their own canning and marketing?

Japanese editors and statesmen guess that Russia and China are "bluffing" in their war talk, but they may be mistaken.

Russia proved to European allies, and to Uncle Sam, that she couldn't be controlled from the outside. The allied nations, humiliated, retired before Bolshevism.

Russia seems inclined now to prove that she who can't be invaded can invade others. She starts in the orthodox way, shipping high powered guns, airplanes and poison gas to the frontier. The League of Nations, refusing to deal with Russia, except as a repentent, submissive prodigal, made a mistake.

Mr. Wickersham, head of President Hoover's law enforcement commission, wants the states to divide prohibition enforcement with the United States would handle retailers, the national government would handle wholesalers, rum running by ships, automobiles and airplanes.

The arrangement would suit bootleggers, who like to deal with divided authority. But some states, or state governments, do not want prohibition enforced, others would not welcome the cost of enforcement.

The entire police force of New York city, for instance, would hardly deal successfully with that city's 32,000 speakeasies.

The Earl of Derby, famous English sportsman, comes to America next spring to see the Kentucky Derby and other races, and wants particularly to see Senator Borah.

The noble Earl pronounces his name as though it were spelled "DARBY." The British are weak on pronunciation.

Lord Derby once said: "Senator Borah seems to think we British are Ogres." Borah replied, "No, I admire the British, who have always been loyal to their flag, which I think is worth preserving."

Joseph E. Widener is said to have offered Lord Derby a million dollars for one thoroughbred horse, a record price.

Lord Derby, interested in horses, not in money, would not sell.

Joseph E. Sheedy, energetic young president of the steamship line that bought the Leviathan from Uncle Sam, will build two ships bigger than the Leviathan. Each will cost $25,000,000, displace 56,000 tons, carry 4000 passengers.

GOVERNOR IN WARNING TO TRUSTS

Ohioan Tells Utilities Their Ideals Must Be High in Great Combines

Groton, Ct., July 18—Warning that the people will deal "with directness and force" in big utility mergers that have for their purpose "selfishness and greed," was voiced by Governor Myers Y. Cooper of Ohio, in an address today before the conference of Governors.

The right kind of consolidations, however, will meet with no objection from the public, he declared.

"If consolidations and enlargements bring to the people advantages of service and a consequent lowering in costs, then benefits will accrue and such consolidations will prove of advantage to the people," said Governor Cooper.

"It on the other hand great aggregations of wealth enjoying monopolistic privileges fail to contribute to the economic and social wellbeing and use these enterprises for the purpose of selfishness and greed, the people will not be without remedy to deal with

CHINESE DRIVE BACK RUSSIANS NEAR BORDER

Soviet Army Plans for a Possible War Are Revealed; Tokio May Intervene

Tokyo, July 18 (AP)—It was indicated this afternoon that there was a possibility of Japan's making representations to both China and Russia with a view to the maintenance of peace.

London, July 18 (INS)—Dispatches telling of heavy troop movements along the Manchurian border and of a serious clash between Soviet and Chinese troops reached here today.

The latter dispatch said a large body of Russian troops attempted to cross the Amur river, which forms the border between Manchuria and Soviet Russia, and were repulsed by superior forces.

Other messages told of troop concentrations at several strategic spots. One report said that a large force of Russians, equipped with airplanes, poison gas apparatus and field guns, were concentrating at Pogranichnaya for entry into Manchuria in the event of war.

AMERICANS STRANDED

More than a score of foreign travelers, including a dozen Americans, the others being English, French and Japanese, are reported stranded on the Russian side of the border following suspension of railroad traffic at Manchuli and because the Russians are seizing the trains for troop movements.

Gen. Budeny, generalissimo of the Soviet army, is reported in an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Riga to have planned the following:

1—Concentrate a powerful fleet of air squadrons along the Manchurian borders.

2—Reinforce all the Soviet forces in the frontier regions.

3—Commandeer all available railways necessary to the movement of these reinforcements.

4—Reinforce the Leningrad and Moscow garrisons.

A Shanghai message said 40,000

200 REMOVED AS BOAT IS DISABLED

Broken Steering Gear Forces Nantasket Ship to Summon Aid

Disabled by a broken steering gear near Bumkin Island while en route from Nantasket to Boston today, the steamer Mary Chilton was forced to lower anchor and summon assistance. Nearly 200 passengers were transferred to the Nantasket and carried to Boston, arriving an hour late.

The boat left the beach at the usual hour, 8:35 o'clock, and about 20 minutes later discovered the damaged equipment. She hove to immediately and radioed for the other steamer, which came from Nantasket.

By use of a small deck board, the passengers walked the plank to the other ship. The Nantasket continued on to Pemberton and picked up about 300 more people before finishing the trip to Boston.

The arrival in Boston was at 10:50 o'clock, approximately an hour over-due. Passengers reported no excitement due to the incident, and many seemed to enjoy the thrill of an ocean transfer. Many jokes were heard about "walking the plank."

The Mary Chilton is now anchored at the supply pier where she will remain until repaired, or later towed to Nantasket.

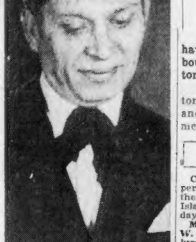
In Train Wreck



Morris Gest, noted theatrical producer, whose production of "The Miracle" amazed the world, was a passenger on the train which was wrecked in Colorado.

FAST TRAIN PLUNGES INTO COLORADO CREEK, MORRIS GEST ABOARD

Denver, Col., July 18—Twenty persons were reported to have been killed when Rock Island passenger train No. 5, westbound from Chicago, plunged into Landsman creek, near Stratton Col., 150 miles east of Denver, shortly after 3 a. m. today.

According to a report to the Denver Post from its Stratton correspondent, the train plunged hrough a weakened bridge and two of the Pullmans on the all-Pullman train were submerged in the creek.

Injured in Wreck

Chicago, July 18 (AP)—Among persons injured in the wreck of the Colorado express of the Rock Island lines near Straton, Colo., today were:

F. S. NIMS, 70, Cushing, Okla.; back wrenched.

E. Z. PERRY, 1353 Rockdale st., New Bedford, Mass.; both hands cut, not serious.

MRS. G. E. WALLACE, McKeen, Pa.; sprained back and shoulder.

A partial list of passengers on the wrecked train, all of whom the company said were safe, was announced by Rock Island officials and include:

MORRIS GEST, New York.

RUTH CHAMBERLAIN, Ithaca, N. Y.

ABE KRITZER, Brooklyn, N. Y.

BARBARA ZINTGAS, Riverside, N. J.

First reports said 12 persons were dead, to have been drowned and there were reports this number probably would be increased to 20.

The creek, ordinarily a dry wash, had become a raging torrent during the last 24 hours, as a result of extremely heavy rains.

MORRIS GEST ABOARD.

All physicians at Stratton, Burlington and Limon have been rushed to the scene and wrecking crews have been dispatched from Colorado Springs, western terminus of the road.

Morris Gest, theatrical producer of New York city, en route to Denver, was a passenger on the train.

One coach, in which passengers were trapped, was wholly submerged. A highway bridge paralleling the railroad bridge was washed out.

Ambulances and doctors from Limon and West of the wreck were delayed in reaching the scene by high water.

TRAPPED UNDER WATER

Until the water recedes, rescue work will be difficult, said telephone reports. It was estimated that it would take four hours for the water to lower sufficiently to begin operations.

Only the train crew were awake when the train plunged into the raging torrent. Approximately 500 passengers were asleep in their berths.

The train, which is a through passenger from the east, carried 20 coaches, four of these, including the baggage car and the locomotive, went into the creek.

The heavy load on the train was attributed to summer tourist travel.

An automobile road which parallels the railroad for some distance, was five feet under water at the scene of the accident. This prevented anyone from reaching the scene immediately.

The car in which the victims were trapped asleep, pitched into the water at a 45 degree angle. The water was reported to be from seven to ten feet deep.

HEROIC RESCUE WORK

Rescuers found seven to eight inches of water in the region last night. The water was slowly receding from higher ground this morning, but gullies and cuts were still filled. Roads were washed out in every direction and highway bridges went out before the torrent.

Dr. Henry L. Williams of Flager, 26 miles from the wreck, was the first physician to reach the scene. Dr. O. P. Kenney, coroner of Brighton, Col., arrived shortly after and the two, with passengers, began rescue work.

Pullman passengers, clad only in night clothes, gave what aid they could in rescuing others caught in cars and tossed about by the flood water.

The bridge swept away was about 75 feet long. It was a wooden structure and was across a sand draw on a straight stretch of track. The water at the wreck was reported running 100 yards wide.

One report said that screams of the women and children rose above the roar of the rushing water.

Reports from Limon, Col., said eight had been taken to that place from the scene of the wreck.

MAN BURNED IN EVERETT FIRE

An explosion of varnish which he was mixing in the plant of Briggs-Maroney Company, paint manufacturers at 85 Paris st, Everett, today, seriously injured Lorenson Marshall, 32, of Revere. He was removed to Massachusetts General Hospital in a police ambulance.

Fire, which followed the explosion and which did slight damage, was extinguished by Everett fire department. Marshall's helper was slightly burned but cared for his own injuries.

SON IS BORN TO IRENE CASTLE

Chicago, July 18 (AP)—Another child, this time a boy, has been born to Maj. and Mrs. Frederic McLaughlin. Mrs. McLaughlin is the former Irene Castle, dancer. Her husband is a prominent sportsman.

The son was born Tuesday night at Michael Reese Hospital and was placed in the hospital incubator where doctors said it had a good chance to grow and thrive. The condition of Mrs. McLaughlin was reported as satisfactory.

The McLaughlins are parents of a daughter, Barbara, now three and a half.

Two Men Hurt in Somerville Crash

Two men were injured early today at Broadway and Northern Artery in Somerville, when a sedan operated by Leonidas Forcier of Orange st., Manchester, N. H., and a touring car operated by Wilbur Campbell of Chelmsford st., Lowell, collided.

Campbell and a passenger, William J. Cunningham of Crescent ave., Beachmont, were taken to the Somerville Hospital suffering from possible internal injuries.

The following day he again arrested Pearl for speeding on Old Colony Boulevard, for which he will appear in Dorchester court tomorrow.

Convent Is Raided Without Warrant

Los Angeles, July 18 (AP)—Details of a raid by prohibition agents from the district attorney's office on a convent in Belvedere, a suburb, were contained in an order issued by District Attorney Buron Fitts that his subordinates should obtain search warrants before invading private residences.

The raid was made on the convent, in which refugee nuns from Mexico were housed, by deputies acting on a tip from the constable's office of Belvedere that a still was in operation there, Fitts said.

Garden Wants "Chi" for Sharkey Fight

By EDWARD J. GEIGER

Special Correspondent

Chicago, July 18—If the Illinois boxing commission consents as it did once before, to allow outside interests to invade the local field, Jack Sharkey, recognized heavyweight champion, and Max Schmeling will do battle in the stadium, Soldier Field, sometime in September.

The Madison Square Corporation has made a request through George Getz, I am told, for the use of Soldiers' Field. Just what date the Eastern Corporation will take, has not been decided, but Mr. Getz has asked for a date between September 18 and October 1. The request for the stadium was made to the South Park Board, but no action has been taken.

PLOT FOILED TO KILL AUSTRIAN

Vienna, July 18 (AP)—An attempt against the life of President Miklas of Austria was frustrated today with the arrest of a man giving his name as Anton Leitner, tailor's assistant.

Leitner was stated by the police to have admitted he was seeking to ambush the president near the gate of the foreign office.

The man loitered near the gate with a loaded revolver in his pocket for some time. Finally his suspicious actions caused a police investigation and he was arrested.

It was first thought that he was planning to assassinate Chancellor Streeruwitz.

THREE FAMILIES FLEE FIRE

A fireman was seriously injured, a boy refused to leave a burning building until he had rescued his pet kitten, and three families were driven to the street by two two-alarm fires in Neponset today.

The fires, which brought the total of major blazes in Greater Boston to six within three days, occurred at 375-385 Neponset ave., and the Cary Lumber Yard, Tolman and Normand sts.

At the Neponset ave., blaze, which started in the basement of a two-story block, Capt. James Stout, of Ladder 27, was badly cut by glass as he smashed in doors to warn sleeping tenants of the danger.

Bobby Crawford, 14, of 375 Neponset ave., refused to leave the house until he had found and rescued his kitten, Petite, three weeks old.

Among those who fled the flames were Jeremiah Collins, proprietor of a variety store at 383 Neponset ave.; Mrs. Clara Crawford, a widow, 383 Neponset ave.; Mary Crawford, 21, Thomas Crawford, 20 Claire Crawford and Bobby, all of 383 Neponset ave.; James McGowan, his wife and a baby of 375 Neponset ave., and Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Baker and their four-year-old daughter, Doris, of 373 Neponset ave.

The lumber yard fire at Tolman and Normand sts., started in the weighing shack, and threatened a thickly settled neighborhood.

Only hard work by the department prevented the spread of flames to stacked boards.

Seek Ship Afire Off Florida Coast

Sarasota, Fla., July 18—Search was continued today for a steamer believed to be afire five to 10 miles off the coast. The manager of a Sarasota Beach hotel said he saw a cloud of smoke and the reflection of flames several miles out. A Coast Guard cutter from St. Petersburg started the search.

Los Angeles, July 18 (AP)—Alvin Knetzmel, cameraman, and Wyndam Hauber, "stunt man" of a motion picture company, were killed today at Reseda, when their plane went into a spin and crashed. The men were engaged in preparation for a picture to be filmed next week.

RUSSIAN ARMY CHIEF'S ORDERS FOR POSSIBLE WAR REVEALED

GAS APPARATUS IS DISPATCHED TO MANCHURIA

Airplanes and Heavy Guns Added to Equipment on Chinese Border

Russian troops were massed between Blagovestchensk and Manchuli.

Dispatches from Harbin confirm reports that Chinese troop trains were proceeding in the direction of Pogranichnaya and Manchuli and that the Mukden arsenal is working at fever pitch.

A dispatch from Peking states that French passengers on a trans-Siberian railway train were delayed for three days between Moscow and Harbin by Russian troop trains blocking the lines.

The Soviet Russian charge d'affaires and the Soviet consul were recalled to Moscow from Peiping (Peking) by the Soviet government today.

The Soviets have begun closing Russian business houses throughout Manchuria and are withdrawing Russian women and children from Manchurian summer resorts.

ALL BLAME ON CHINA.

The Soviet Government, in its reply to the Chinese note, placed entire blame for the flare-up in China, and announced complete severance of diplomatic relations.

The official Chinese reply to the Soviet ultimatum of Saturday regards every demand made in the Russian communication, and on this ground the Soviets announced their drastic measures of reprisal.

These measures are four in number. In addition to recalling diplomatic representatives and expelling consular officials, the Soviet Government has severed communications on the Manchurian frontier and has recalled all Soviet representatives of the Chinese Eastern Railway.

Hoover is Keeping Close Watch on Far East Crisis

Washington, July 18 (AP)—The Washington Government is keeping close watch on the rapidly developing controversy between Russia and China.

With America's extensive Far Eastern interests necessarily involved, the State Department is in constant touch with the situation. President Hoover himself has followed developments with an interest intensified, not only by the gravity of the situation, but by an intimate knowledge of the places and conditions involved that he gained during years of travel in Siberia and Manchuria as a mining engineer.

By some officials, the severance of diplomatic relations was accepted as a logical result of the stand taken by the Soviet Government, its ultimatum and veiled threat of retaliation, for the seizure of the Chinese eastern railway.

Others were of the belief that economic circumstances would avert actual warfare.

They pointed out that both Nanking and Moscow regimes are young as governments go, have yet to attain financial stability for expansive war. The food shortage in both countries also was cited, with the belief that Russia would meet in transporting troops and supplies across Siberia.

World diplomacy, it was felt, also would bring its influence to bear in favor of peace. The League of Nations war treaty, of which both Russia and China are adherents was regarded as another important factor making for peace.

Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek Calls Cabinet Meeting

Shanghai, July 18 (AP)—A Japanese Reuso agency dispatch from Nanking today said:

"There is reason to believe the Chinese foreign office has not yet recognized the note sent by the Moscow government breaking relations with Nanking.

"It is, however, learned that Gen. Chiang Kai Shek, considering the situation most serious, has called the Government's political officials to Nanking for a conference, specifically desiring C. T. Wang, foreign minister, who is en route from Tsingtao and is expected in Nanking July 20."

Tokio Fears Break Means Actual War

A foreign office spokesman said the new Soviet note did not necessarily mean war, but he added: "We do not at all exclude the possibility of open war between the two countries, as a loss of the Chinese Eastern Railway must be a matter of life and death to Vladivostok."

The Japanese general staff admitted that concentration of Russian and Chinese troops along the border caused apprehension. It was feared that proximity in the present inflammable state of mind might bring on a clash.

FRENCH FLIERS TO AGAIN TRY OCEAN HOP

Costes and Bellonte Expect Flight Sanction by Air Ministry

By DIEUDONNE COSTES, PILOT, AND MAURICE BELLONTE, NAVIGATOR

Of the airplane Question Mark, in which the two French aviators expect to attempt a non-stop flight from Paris to New York within a week. They were forced to return to Paris after flying almost to the Azores in the tragic first transatlantic air race last Saturday. This is the third installment of their own story of their unsuccessful attempt and plans for their coming flight.

Written exclusively for the Boston Evening American and allied Hearst newspapers and for Universal Service, Inc.

(Copyright, 1929, in all countries by New York Americans, Inc., and by Universal Service, Inc. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part prohibited.)

Paris, July 18—It was only a month we were finally ready to attempt the East-to-West transatlantic flight. Our intention had been kept secret, as the French air minister, M. Laurent Eynac, forbade any kind of transatlantic flying.

This put us in the delicate position of facing not only the authorities but also our Polish friends, who were also seeking to brave the Atlantic. We observed the greatest discretion at all times that our plans should not be discovered. But as a result of a leak yet unexplained, newspapers announced plans for our departure 15 days before we took off. We had all the troubles in the world denying the report in order to quiet public opinion, inopportunely excited by the news.

At last, the atmospheric conditions proving favorable, we hastened arrangements and departed. Our departure simultaneously with Idzikowski and Kubala had not been premeditated. If we left almost together, it was only because the weather conditions had decided for both of us.

EXPECT SANCTION

That demonstration proving the excellence of our machine and the reliability of our abilities, there is evidently no question of the French government's preventing a second departure.

We visited the air ministry, spraining M. Eynac and members of the cabinet of the technical details of the first flight. No opposition intervening in the meantime, we'll take off again within a few days.

We supervised an examination of the Question Mark again yesterday. Everything is in order. Before the end of the week, it will be ready to carry us off again.

The meteorological authorities with whom we are in close communication, have drawn up a careful table of forecasts. We are filled with great hopes.

We hope American people, especially American pilots and plane and motor builders, are examining closely the problem of crossing the Atlantic from Europe to America, and more particularly, from Paris to New York.

They will realize the enormous obstacles to overcome.

We shall find tremendously exciting and interesting to see an American airplane and an American crew participate in an open Paris to New York competition. That would prove prodigiously exciting to the whole world.

We are continuing without a halt our preparations for our new transatlantic flight. We are sure that we will not modify our plans in the slightest degree, except as its present state, the best qualities of aeronautic science.

Perhaps, out of scrupule, we will make a tiny modification consisting of enlarging slightly the rudder, which best suits our plane. We think the tail will carry better thus in the air. This little transformation was not necessary, but it is likely to economize a little in fatigue, but not much in flying.

We will continue to keep all navigation instruments already used. Our wireless set, both transmitting and receiving, served us incomparably well on this subject we will give a few details worthy of being noted, concerning the use we expect to make of our wireless, as well as our curious radio-telegraphic and aerial navigation discoveries made during the flight over the Atlantic.

Our wireless consists essentially of a transmitter of 150 watts power, three tubes; broadcasting stations of Europe work at 1100 meters by modulated waves. Our radius is 1000 kilometers, that is sufficient for receiving the night. We have a superheterodyne receiver, constructed especially for long amplification and a minimum of interference.

The transmitter is fed by a generator driven by a little propeller outside, and by means of a brake can be instantly stopped or brought inside the plane for minor repairs if necessary.

Our antennae are of the suspended type; that is to say, made of wire hanging under the airplane. We can put the antennae out or bring it in at any moment.

LAUDS WIRELESS

We are most appreciative of our wireless, we have almost an affection for it. Imagine two men finding themselves between the sky and the ocean, thousands of miles from land, in almost absolute solitude. If they were not connected with the world by wireless they would break down immediately.

If the wireless ceases to function as the result of a minor fracture, agonising solitude resulting affects men almost as if they were dead.

Our airplanes have five call letters, as "F" followed by four others. Our call is FRANB.

We kept in constant communication after we departed from Paris, telling the station at Bordeaux and another in Spain that everything was going well. We sent messages to our folks, and a few minutes later heard them relaying the signals.

While crossing the Gulf of Gascogne, where we saw many picturesque fishing smacks, we kept in communication with Bordeaux. A little beyond Santander, one of the violent squalls knotted our aerial.

It was as this moment we suffered the most heat. At 3000 meters it was more than 35 degrees centigrade. Bellonte (writes Costes), in order to avoid sunstroke, wrapped his head in a scarf, and looked like a regular tuareg of the Sahara. Soon we were both obliged to undress. We were baked.

HIT STORM ZONE

At last we got into wireless contact again, just as we passed Cap-Finisterre. We profited by this immediately, sending message to our families. Between the 8th and 16th longitudes, we experienced difficulty in hearing, because we were travelling through a storm zone.

Some time later a message trickled through in pieces, but we couldn't identify it, and don't yet know its name—we haven't tried to find out.

What struck us most oddly at the moment was that it called S P A P, which was the call of the Polish plane, Marshall Pilsudski. S P A P didn't answer. K U D R repeated calls, asking where they were. Always no answer. Then we started in, letting K U D R know where we were in communication with him. K U D R acknowledged the reception of our message but his signals were very weak.

Soon G F S N, on the English ship Balmoral, having intercepted our message, learned of our presence and entered into communication with us. Its signals were very much stronger than those of K U D R, and we were thankful for being able to work G F S N.

We talked with him about an hour, asking position and our own bearings. We found their position, but they couldn't establish ours—they had no goniometre. We continued on our course, calling European coastal stations.

ROME FLIERS START HOME TOMORROW

Special Cable Dispatch

Paris, July 8—We are seeing Paris. It is really hardly fair to expect two men who are seeing Paris to have much to say while they are still seeing it. At some other time, perhaps, we might be prepared to tell something of what we saw while in the gay French capital.

We flew here from Rome in our faithful Pathfinder, making the trip without incident except that we covered the distance in about one-third the time of the fastest trains. That is something.

We left Rome with the hearty good wishes of the Italian people and the cheers of a throng who saw us off after our happy days as guests of the government there. Among the first to greet us when we came down at 5:34 this evening at Le Bourget field, was our Old Orchard Beach companions of the Yellow Bird, with whom we had hoped to start our Atlantic hop—they headed for Paris and us for Rome, we both hit Santander.

The officials of the French air ministry were also on hand to greet us and when we reached our hotel we found the French and American flags side by side in our suite.

Now we must get everything in ship shape to leave for home tomorrow. Our plane must be carefully prepared for shipment.

As for ourselves, there is not much to be done. We brought little with us and although we acquired some things since our advent into Europe we have not as much, as European tourists go.

Of course we will get some more things in Paris—everybody does. But now we are only seeing things and that is the most important thing.

TRUSTS WARNED BY GOVERNOR

the situation and that with directness and force."

Governor Cooper declared that an important question before the American people has to do with proper regulation of great aggregations of wealth invested in enterprises of a quasi-public nature for general service to the people.

MUST GIVE SERVICE

"The attitude of the people toward the function of government in this matter is definitely fixed and clear," he said. "While recognizing the need for expansion, the people demand that government shall so regulate these vast interests as fully to protect them against unjust rates and inferior service.

To talk about destroying or tearing down structures of this character is simply to ignore the bigness of the age in which we live and the tremendous exactions made upon such service.

"The real test and value to the people of large corporate interests is found in the capacity and the will to better serve, and, since government has authority and undertaken to regulate and to determine such matters as service and rates on a basis of fairness and equity, we are at the point where public rights may be fully protected by proper administration of public affairs."

Speaking of law enforcement, Governor Cooper said that President Hoover, "with clarity and deep conviction," recognized in his inaugural address the great need for co-operation on the part of the people. He said this was a "challenge to every individual citizen."

TOO MUCH LAW.

"A spirit of lawlessness lifted its menacing head at the conclusion of the World War," Cooper contended, and, strange as it may seem, we have seen in otherwise reputable quarters the condoning, rather than the condemning of offenses against the law.

"It is the bounden obligation of all good citizens to be obedient to the law and uphold those who are charged with the responsibility of its enforcement. Problems of law enforcement are for the private citizen as well as for the public official, and we should not become impatient if progress appears slow. We need to make it a popular thing to observe the law and we should not popularize the breaking of the law."

Governor Cooper scored the tendency to resort to legislation as a panacea for social, moral and economic ills, adding: "The truth is there has been an all too common disposition to legislate on everything and to regulate everybody on the theory of public good."

Control of Railroad Crux of Controversy

The Chinese Eastern Railway, the cause of the Russian-Chinese dispute, was built and controlled by the old Imperial Russian government. It provides, through Northern Manchuria, the most direct route to the Russian port of Vladivostock. It is, therefore, one of the most important links in the Russian Trans-Siberian Railway.

When the Soviet government, a few years ago, was seeking to woo the Chinese revolutionists to Communism, Moscow renounced all Russian rights in the Chinese Eastern Railway and turned complete ownership and control over to the Chinese.

A little later the Soviets declared they had made a mistake and that some sort of Russian control of the road was vital to them. They then made a deal with the Chinese, with whom they were on good terms, to cancel the gift and set up a joint ownership and control of the road. Half the officials were to be Russian and half Chinese. In the end, however, the Russians obtained virtual control.

Some days ago the Chinese government officials announced that they had decided to assert their right to complete control of the railway. Therefore, they expelled all Russian officials and dumped them over the Siberian border.

Moscow gave China three days to agree to restore joint control of the railway and reinstate all Russian officials.

As this was not done, though China has agreed to a conference to discuss the matter, the Soviet government has broken off all diplomatic relations.

FOX RACLES, READS MAIL

Mineola, N. Y., July 18 (AP)—The condition of William Fox, motion picture producer, showed progress today in his recovery from injuries suffered in an automobile accident yesterday.

After a blood transfusion, the film magnate spent a fairly comfortable night, although he was somewhat restless.

After breakfast he demanded that important letters in the morning mail be sent to him at Nassau County Hospital.

Mr. Fox's chauffeur, Joseph Boyes, 36, was killed in the crash. Jacob Rubenstein, a friend riding with Fox, sustained slight bruises.

Later Dr. Post said:

"Fox is severely injured, but his condition is not alarming. He is progressing satisfactorily and his condition is favorable. There is no discovery of any brain injury as yet."

Mr. Fox minimized the extent of his injuries and sent out word through one of his executives that he had suffered no more than a slight scalp abrasion and would be about in two days.

Representatives of Fox companies protested to hospital officials that first statements that he had severely injured caused a drop in Fox film stock of 3½ points.

Miss Kane, who detectives said had no driver's license, was arrested but released with a summons to court. The car she was driving was owned by her sister, Muriel, who, with another girl, was a passenger. None of them was injured. The sisters are listed in the Social Register.

Life insurance carried by Mr. Fox totals $6,400,000. He once remarked that if no one else would be sorry for his death, he would be mourned by the president of every large insurance company.

HUNT ABDUCTOR OF GIRL, 9

Northampton, July 18—State and local police were seeking a man in a blue motor car who abducted 9-year-old Fannie Cebulski, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Cebulski of North Hatfield and attempted to assault the child.

The girl was playing with a younger sister near an onion field where her parents were working when the motorist drove up and asked her if she would like to go berrying. She hesitated, but when the man offered her a dime to come nearer the car she stepped onto the running board and was pulled into the machine.

Her parents, on seeing the child leaving with the stranger, telephoned Chief of Police Arthur R. Bircr of Hatfield, who set out on the trail of the car.

Near the Hatfield reservoir, on Horse Mountain, about two miles from the scene of the abduction, Chief Bircr found the child coming out of the woods.

She said the man threatened her with a knife when she resisted him. Desperate, she bit his hand and eluded him.

PLAN FOR VISIT OF MacDONALD

London, July 18—Informal conversations between Premier Ramsay MacDonald and Ambassador Charles G. Dawes on naval reduction have reached the point where the question of the Premier's visit to the United States is the subject of diplomatic negotiations.

These negotiations were said to be with regard to the time of the Prime Minister's visit and to making it effective in promoting the cause of naval disarmament.

There has been no new official statement regarding the conversations since the intimation of J. H. Thomas, Lord Privy Seal, in an address last Friday that they were proceeding "well."

The Earl of Derby, noted sportsman, diplomat and public figure, and Senator William H. Borah may meet and get acquainted early next year, for Lord Derby plans to visit the United States at that time.

It is recalled here that Lord Derby, two years ago, invited the senator from Idaho to visit him at Knowsley Hall, his country home near Liverpool, and stay as long as he liked. Senator Borah was not able to accept the invitation, but he sent a cordial letter of thanks.

TRUANT FLEES IN 'DISGUISE'

Lowell, July 18—To escape detection Henry Srotion, 15, an inmate of Middlesex Training school, North Chelmsford, who took French leave yesterday, "pinched" the clothing of Charles Shattuck, who was in swimming in Concord river at Billerica and left his truant school uniform.

Fearing arrest if not properly clothed, young Shattuck was forced to don the uniform and wear it until he reached home, when he discarded it for civilian attire.

In the meantime young Srotion was on his way to parts unknown and the police force of school officials are searching for him today. He hails from Reading.

Steps on Starter, Car Nearly Wrecked

Brunswick, Me., July 18—Dr. Anna M. Gove of Greensboro, N. C., drove her car into a narrow alley when she accidentally stepped on the starter while the machine was parked on Main st. The car dashed between two buildings which were so close together that the mudguards on both sides of the car were demolished, and started down a decline leading to the Androscoggin river.

The speed of the car was checked as it passed the first building. Dr. Gove dropped the road map which she had been studying and jammed on the brake, stopping the car as it reached the steepest part of the incline.

EMBRYO SCOUT PROVES HERO

Portland, Me., July 18—Stephen Dill, 13-year-old messenger boy bought a Boy Scout manual, but hesitated to read in it seemed too good to be true.

However, when Steve saw Weiden Wakefield, 16, struggling in the water of a swimming hole at "the basin," he remembered what the Scout book had said about rescuing drowning persons. He plunged to Wakefield's assistance, subdued the youth with a trick hold, towed him ashore, and worked on him for an hour, using the prone pressure system of resuscitation.

SEES ATTEMPT TO WIPE OUT EXPORT LAW

Maine Publisher Warns Public to Defeat Monopolistic Aim of Capitalists

Durham, N. H., July 17—A scathing attack on the Insull power interests charged with having accepted nomination of the power industry in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont was made today by Ernest Gruening, publisher of the Portland, Me., News speaking at the conference on power problems of the New Hampshire League of Women Voters at the University of New Hampshire.

The power conference in two day session took up various phases of the power situation. Among the speakers were: Commissioner Lewis Goldberg of Boston, representing the Department of Public Utilities in Massachusetts; Dr. John Bower, director American Public Utilities Bureau, New York, and Walter B. Wyman, president New England Service Co.

DISCUSS LIGHT RATES

Representatives of State branches of the League of Women Voters from the New England States discussed electric light and power rates service and regulation from the point of view of the consumer. Mrs. Eva G. Osgood of Melrose, Mass., representing the living costs committee of the Massachusetts League, explained the situation in Massachusetts.

In his speech on "The Power Situation in New England," Dr. Gruening paid much attention to the activities of the Insull power interests of Illinois. He said: "Insull now controls three-quarters of the total distribution of power in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

"He is out to wipe out the present law in Maine against the export of power from that state. The question will come before the people of Maine on the ballot at the election next September and you may depend on it that Insull will spend money to get this through."

PYRAMIDING OF COMPANIES

"Now, who pays for all that pyramiding of holding companies? The consumers of the operating companies. They must pay in their rate dividends which are taken by one after another of these holding companies, so that the public pays in two ways as a consumer, paying excessive rates to support the enormous burden of interests of dividend charges built up by this pyramiding of holding companies; and again as an investor putting up the money to put out power companies right and left at inflated prices.

"But the consumers, although they provide the money for floating these companies, are not given common stock. They must be content with five, six or seven per cent on bonds or preferred stock, while the gentleman who plays the game of high finance keeps the common stock for himself and skims off the cream.

N. E. RATES HIGHER

"As a consequence, rates in New England are far higher than they should be. The great Ontario Hydro Electric plant owned and operated by the public and serving a number of cities and towns in the province of Ontario, Canada, has an average residential rate for electricity of less than two cents per kilowatt hour.

"In Maine, the average residential rate is eight cents and four mills and in New Hampshire the average rate is more than 10 cents. If the power companies have to fight this high finance the consumers must meet the bills.

"Expecting the influence of Insull in Maine," Gruening said, "when the bill to repeal the present law forbidding export of electric power was pending in the Maine Legislature this year, the speaker of the House, who is a member of a law firm which represented the Cumberland Light and Power Company, cast the deciding vote in favor of the repeal bill.

"His firm was part of the legal lobby which went down to Washington and joined the power companies in opposing the resolution of Senator Walsh of Montana, for a federal investigation of the power industry.

"The acquisition of power companies is going on at such a pace that a small group of people is getting a monopolistic control over this great natural resource.

"They are attempting to get theirs while the getting is good. It is up to the public to rise in its might and get what properly belongs to it. The time will come when electricity will overshadow everything else as a source of motive power, and for the sake of the future of the country, steps must be taken to protect the heritage of the people."

"Of course every attempt to protect the public is attacked by the propagandists of the power companies as radical and socialistic."

Gruening scored the power interest for alleged widespread use of propaganda in the press and in educational institutions throughout the country.

ANTI-SALOON AGENT HELD AS EXTORTIONER

"Protected" Speakeasies for Nominal Fee, Authorities Charge

New Haven, Ct., July 18—Ernest H. DePue, 54, an alleged agent of the Connecticut Anti-Saloon League, was under arrest today, charged with extorting money from speakeasy proprietors.

According to the police, DePue, posing as the president of a private detective agency, sold liquor dealers tin "protection" signs which he guaranteed would secure them immunity from arrest if hung over their bars.

The authorities accused DePue on three specific counts, claiming he received $30 from one bootlegger, $100 from a second and $500 from a third. There were other victims, according to the police, but these feared to come forward with complaints.

Investigators claimed DePue's "system" to be as follows:

He would write to liquor dealers, warning them to come to see him if they did not want to be raided. When they called at his office, he would show them a row of "exhibits"—bottles supposedly obtained from their establishments. He would then declare that he felt it his duty to prosecute, but that he was "open to reason."

The "reason" to which he would listen was allegedly cash only.

DePue's firm was listed in the directory as the Mercantile Detective Agency, with headquarters in the Liberty building, New Haven.

The tin "protection" signs bore on one side the inscription "Protected by the Mercantile Detective Agency" and on the other the words, "Member of the Mercantile Protective System."

A letter found on DePue by the police purported to be from the Connecticut Anti-Saloon League. It declared that DePue was working for the league and was "doing his best to clean up the wet situation in New Haven."

According to DePue, he was employed by the Anti-Saloon League last year, "cleaning up" shore resorts on a "fee basis."

Supt. Roscoe B. Vining of the Connecticut Anti-Saloon League could not be reached at his home early today, but, according to the police, Vining was present at the station house when DePue was searched and Vining himself found the alleged letter of endorsement by the league.

Proposes to Make Auto Sleuths of Citizens

Concord, N. H., July 18—Commissioner of Motor Vehicles John F. Griffin has taken official cognizance of a 30 per cent increase in fatal automobile accidents in New Hampshire so far this year, and announced that he is planning the organization of a State-wide group of public-spirited citizens who will report motor vehicle law violations.

Under the proposed plan citizens in the State-wide body of "unofficial inspectors" would report such violations as they observe on the highways, and regular inspectors would trace down the information.

Capt. McGinnis was appointed to Gen. Summerall during his stay here.

Following the greetings at the station, the war commander of the First Army Corps, was escorted to the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, with four State police leading on motorcycles, and breakfasted.

Then the party proceeded to Devens for the divisional review.

Gen. Summerall was to leave for Washington again in the late afternoon.

GERMAN, U. S. SCIENTISTS IN ROCKET RACE

Auburn Scare Reveals Extensive Plans in Air Research

Worcester, July 18—A race between German and American scientists, who seeks knowledge of the upper atmosphere for the advancement of aviation, was revealed today in a statement by President Walter W. Atwood of Clark University, commenting upon the explosion of a rocket over Auburn yesterday.

The rocket used yesterday, traveling more than a mile straight into the air, was discharged by Prof. Robert H. Goddard, who is experimenting with a new explosive expected to carry projectiles to a height never before reached.

VEILED IN SECRECY.

It was the series of explosions propelling the projectile that alarmed the countryside yesterday and gave rise to that report that an airplane had exploded in midair.

Progress with experiments in the new propellant have been shrouded with secrecy here because similar experiments are being made by German scientists.

"It is a neck-and-neck race between the German scientists and Dr. Goddard," said President Atwood. "They are using the principals Dr. Goddard has worked out and which has been published. So far Dr. Goddard is a few laps ahead of the Germans, having overcome many of the obstacles they are now encountering."

Military men all over the world are watching the results of the experiments as they may effect propelled speed and pressure and aviation experts are interested because of a lack of any definite information concerning the upper atmosphere.

"We know little about the air," said Atwood. "If Dr. Goddard can get his rocket up even 20 miles, the information concerning the atmosphere will be invaluable.

"A REAL SCIENTIST"

"When Dr. Goddard succeeds with his experiment he will be a world famous. It is one of the foremost pieces of research work being carried on at this time. If Dr. Goddard spent his time on other problems he would probably solve them with little difficulty for he is a remarkable man and a real scientist. It is the most difficult task and spent years on it."

It was Dr. Goddard who years ago first conceived the idea of shooting a man to the moon within the shell of a rocket.

The projectile hurled into the air yesterday from a 200 foot steel tower in an Auburn mayfield where Dr. Goddard has been conducting his secret experiments was about nine feet long and as large as a man's waist in circumference.

MOST POWERFUL YET

The Clark University head revealed that Dr. Goddard has been using devices similar to the one rocket, sometimes blowing a model to pieces in order to determine how much pressure it would stand. The nature of yesterday's propellant both Dr. Goddard and Pres. Atwood refused to disclose. That it was far more powerful than anything heretofore used is attested by the fact that many other projectiles have been shot up from the Auburn field without alarming the district.

The roar accompanying the travel of yesterday's rocket was so terrible as to shake houses near the field.

Prof. Goddard and his assistants viewed the experiment from a steel observation hut about 25 feet from the tower. Three men are working with him on the experiments, it was revealed, Laurence C. Mansure of Worcester, who graduated from Clark in June, Henry Sacka and one other.

DENIES DRIVERS WORKED 18 HOURS

President A. P. Russell of the New England Transportation Company, in a letter to Chairman Henry C. Atwill of the Public Utilities Commission, which the latter made public, denied that any of the bus drivers of that company had ever been required or permitted to drive passenger motor coaches for periods of 18 hours and more and distances of 250 miles, as charged by Secretary-Manager Fremont A. Nantelle of the Wachusett Automobile Club in a recent letter to the commission.

Russell declares Nantelle's statement is untrue and without the slightest foundation, and states that the company of which he is the head adheres strictly to the rules of the Public Utilities Commission, including that relating to hours of service.

Tree Roots Trap Boy, Squeeze Him to Death

Cleveland, O., July 18 (AP)—The roots of a large tree closed in on Lester Savage, 12, of Chagrin Falls, and, like a giant trap, they killed him.

Lester had crawled into a cave beneath a tree and had dug away some additional earth. Six other boys begged him to come out.

Suddenly the tree started leaning and the roots shot down over the mouth of the cave. Lester screamed for help, but by the time the rescuers arrived he had been crushed to death.

"Shut up crying, you guys up there; it's all right!" said Lester.

DARING HOLDUP NETS ROBBERS $22,000

Chicago, July 18 (AP)—Three robbers, who stole $22,000 in jewelry and money from Frederick Grabner, racehorse owner, Mrs. Grabner, and Mr. and Mrs. Ruel J. Siegel, their companions, were being sought today.

The carefully planned and well executed robbery took place while the Grabners and Siegels were returning from the Arlington Park race track.

Grabner, owner of "Windy City," winner of this years American Derby, had just finished in the crowded main highway on to a gravel road to evade traffic congestion, when a large sedan, bearing three men, blocked his path. Two men, brandishing pistols, got out of the car, entered the touneau of the Grabner machine, where the women were, and ordered Grabner to drive on. The robber's car followed close behind.

One robber stripped jewelry from the women, while the other robbed the men of jewelry and money. Warning the party to make no outcry, the robber directed Grabner to drive back onto the highway. Siegel, despite the pistol prodding his back, managed to open the car door with his foot and when the traffic procession was halted by a train, he leaped from the car and ran toward a hut.

"Has anyone got a gun?" he cried. "Duck your heads! It's a robbery!"

The two robbers jumped from the car, pistols in hand, and pursued him, but made no effort to fire. They then jumped into their own car, which was close behind Grabner's, and were driven swiftly away down a side road.

Mexico City, July 18 (AP)—Newspaper dispatches from Colima today told how a 14-year-old boy, Adolfo Villanueva was forced to dig his own grave before he was executed by Manuel Marmolejo, bandit chieftain.

Marmolejo's band captured the boy several weeks ago, but he had managed to escape. He was taken again a few days ago and carried to the bandits' mountain retreat where the leader ordered him to dig a grave, telling him it was for a man who had been sentenced to death.

As the task was finished the bandit said to the youth:

"The grave you have dug is your own. You will not escape again."

Marmolejo thereupon drew his pistol and shot the boy, whose body fell into the grave.

Miss Catherine F. Snell of Mt. Holyoke College, Mt. SUSPECT FREED AS DRUNKEN DRIVER

Providence, July 18—John P. King, 3f, of Gordon ave., Providence, won his freedom on a drunken driving charge when Judge Higgins in Seventh District Court, East Providence, decided his rights had been violated because police failed to inform him when arrested that he was entitled to summon his own physician for examination as to his condition.

A similar case was also heard in the Eighth District Court and Judge Dunn took under advisement the case of John J. Baker of 1052 Cranston st., Cranston, when it was learned that the Cranston police failed to notify Baker of his right. Counsel in the Cranston case were given until August 7 to submit briefs.

In the East Providence case Judge Higgins ruled that for the prosecution to comply strictly with the law, a person charged with driving while drunk must be notified of his right to have a physician of his own choice examine him at the time of the police physician's examination. When King was arrested he was taken to the office of Dr. E. A. Burrowes, who pronounced him unfit to duve. King claimed that he demanded to be permitted to communicate with his own doctor, but his request was refused until he was returned to the police station. Then he was unable to locate any of three doctors he called.

VILMA BANKY BESIEGED BY BIG CROWD

Vilma Banky told the huge throng that greeted her on her arrival here, that she is to stay in the United States, and that's why she has taken out American citizenship papers, so that they couldn't send her back to Europe with the rest of the vanguard of foreign stars who have been shipped back to their native heath in foreign countries.

"I was too smart for the producers. I married an American, became an American citizen, and I am learning to speak English just like an American girl," announced "the Hungarian-born American citizen" to a throng of her admirers who swarmed about her in the lobby of the Ritz Carlton Hotel. Several hundred pushed their way through doors in an attempt to shake her hand.

They were given a grand "close-up" of the star. She even showed a few of the girls "something very sacred to me." It was a gold luck charm on her bracelet given to her by her husband, Rod La Rocque. The words "Mama and Papa—Love Rod to Vilma."

She was dressed in a beige ensemble of crepe de chine with a short jacket of the same material. Touches of deep brown ribbon were used as lacings about the neck. She wore a natural colored medium sized hat of baku. Her shoes were brown and white with a single strap and Cuban heels. She wore plain beige chamois gloves.

But what made the biggest hit with the newspaperfolk was her utter lack of affectation. She calmly admitted that she has visited "cities and cities, but all I ever see is the railroad station, crowds, the hotel suite and the theater."

"I find English very difficult, but I love it. I really love everything American from my husband to the movies and American people. I can't tell you that I love Boston because I haven't seen it, but I am sure I would, I am so thoroughly American."

At this point in the interview came an interruption. A long-distance call from Hollywood. It was Rod La Rocque, himself. Miss Banky was audibly excited. She rushed into the bedroom to have the conversation in private.

Knights Plan Outing

Given Royal Welcome

FARM BOARD TO DELAY LOANS FOR PRESENT

Washington, July 18—The Federal Farm Board announced that no loans would be made out of its $150,000,000 fund, now available, pending a determination of policy.

Of the $500,00,000 authorized by Congress for the use of the board, $150,000,000 was appropriated, and there are indications that a number of requests are already on hand for portions of the money.

Announcement also was made by the board that when loans are made the board will deal only with officials of the co-operative marketing associations.

The board announced that it was not in a position at present "to give definite consideration to applications for loans." Moreover the board declared it "logical to expect" that agricultural co-operatives would exhaust the lines of credit obtainable at reasonable rates—both from private banks and the Federal intermediate credit banks—before "coming to the board for further assistance."

As for assistance in establishing physical facilities such as warehouses, the board still is pondering on the policy to be laid down.

Smiles came over the faces of the board members as reports were received of new high levels on the wheat market. News that the price had jumped above the $1.50 a bushel mark was welcomed.

Vermont Poorhouse Taken for Hotel

Rutland, Vt., July 18—Overnight tourists have so often mistaken the local poorhouse for a hotel that local hotel operators started a protest.

When a former proprietor of the Brock House, one of Rutland's hotels, became overseer at the Rutland institution he made it a point to advertise the comforts and service of the former establishment by erecting a large sign on property adjoining the poorhouse.

The farm is situated about a mile from the center of the city, on the main thoroughfare over the Green Mountain range from the east, one traversed by hundreds of motorists each day. The sign invited the tourists to put up over night at the hotel and detailed its accomodations. The huge letters used in spelling the name of the hotel distracted one's attention from notice that the hotel was situated in the city, and the result was that numerous motorists attempted to engage rooms at a poorhouse. The sign has been removed.

Woman Gets Half Year for Attack

Pittsfield, July 18—Mrs. Stanley Messel, found guilty by a jury of superior court of being an accessory before the fact in the assault on Harold O. Plant, 30, in Hinsdale, May 2, was sentenced by Judge David F. Dillon to six months at Sherborne Reformatory.

Plant was left unconscious near his battered automobile after the assault. The attack was made to avenge injuries alleged to have been done by Plant to Rose Messel, 20, daughter of Mrs. Messel, two years ago.

ASKS HEARING FOR ROLFE

A private hearing before the governor on the case of William A. Rolfe, a State Prison inmate, is sought by Attorney Thomas H. Bresnahan, counsel of record for the prisoner, in a letter addressed to Governor Allen.

Rolfe recently applied for pardon and the Advisory Board of Pardons, after hearing his case, reported against his plea. He is serving a sentence of 25 to 30 years for robbery, being sentenced in December, 1925.

Bresnahan claims that Rolfe is not only innocent of the crimes for which he was convicted, but was also not accorded a fair trial.

Bank Failures Laid to Fruit Fly

Washington, July 18 — Twenty-three banks in Florida have failed because of the appearance in the grapefruit and orange-growing sections of the Mediterranean fruit fly, which it is suspected came in on a rum-running ship.

The federal government moved promptly against this dangerous pest which has wrought great destruction in the Hawaiian Islands and other places.

Congress made available $4,250,000 which had been appropriated to combat the pink boll weevil, for the campaign.

Now, it is understood, President Hoover thinks the government can well afford to expend $50,000,000 in the battle against this fly, and for the remuneration of the people who have suffered losses because of it and the quarantine.

Senator Duncan U. Fletcher of Florida has a bill pending in Congress for $10,000,000 to reimburse the farmers of his State who have been injured.

It is estimated that Florida fruit growers have suffered losses totaling approximately $15,000,000 and the loss is piling up. Conferences here during last month resulted in a determination on the part of the administration to rid the country of the pest at any cost.

POLICE 'VETS' MOURN FOR STATION 2

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

Patrolman Tom Brown of 88 Baldwin st., Charlestown, known to every politician and visitor to Boston City Hall, was gazing meditatively out of a window in the Hall, watching the building wreckers tear down the brick building across City Hall ave. that was once the headquarters of Police Station 2.

Brick by brick, board by board, the old station was sliding down in clouds of fine, white dust into the waiting trucks below. Brick by brick, board by board, Tom Brown was building up the station in his own mind again.

Forty-one years had Brown been attached to Station 2. His whole career as a police officer, his whole life, since he was 23, was bound up with that building.

"There they are," he said, turning to the reporter. "There they are wrecking our old bedroom. That's where it used to be," and he pointed to a corner on the third floor that bordered on Williams ct., better known as Pi alley.

WRECKERS WORK ON

Tom watched the wreckers knock masonry after masonry out of his heart as they picked the brick walls to pieces and tore up the flooring of his 40ft. room.

Tom drew a sigh. The wreckers went mechanically on. / One of Boston's landmarks was making room for a library, the gift to the city of Louis E. Kirstein of Wm. Filene Sons' Company.

The site of Station 2 was once the heart of Bostons colonial history. It looked across to the Old State House from one side, and to the old Province House on the other. In late days, it was the Joseph Rowe estate.

In 1841 the Rowe house was sold to the city of Boston, and from land belonging to other colonial families the present City Hall ave. and Williams ct. were laid out.

At any rate, Station 2 enjoys the traditional position as the seat of Boston's modern police system, and is believed to have been the site of the old colonial and post Revolutionary days watch house.

While Tom Brown was recalling the old days, another patrolman, John Harkins, also of Charlestown, came along. Harkins had been attached to Station 2 for 26 years. He and Brown are the only two officers at Station 2 who have never served at any other station in the city.

They both began, as old timers will, to "remember the time."

"Remember," said Brown, "when the old prison stood where the City Hall Annex now is?"

"I do," answered Harkins. "And do you remember the old Probate Court over there where the Kimball Building is? And the old Boston Museum, right next to it?"

"Indeed, I do," replied Brown. "And I remember the old Sherman House, right there where Thompson's Spa Building is." A few old timers who had gathered seemed to light up at the mention of the Sherman House, for that house stood in the days when a man could raise a thirst and quench it.

JOHN L. WAS THERE

There was a great deal of remembering done in a few minutes. Brown and Harkins recalled the time when John L. Sullivan, the Great John L., visited stations, and the day he pleaded with a crowd outside its doors to buy Liberty Bonds.

And Capt. William Pierce, who preceded Michael Crowley as superintendent of police, was recalled.

"It must have been 40 years ago," said Brown, "when Pierce came to Station 2. There was a big shakeup of officers, and a big cleanup of gambling joints. Pierce was the man who put an end to the 'bookies,' who did a thriving business in pool rooms in those days, taking money from those who follow the horses, just as some joints do today."

FRANCE AND U.S. HONOR FLIERS

Paris, July 18 (AP)—Congratulations of two nations were bestowed today upon Capt. Lewis A. Yancey and Roger Q. Williams for their successful transatlantic flight from Old Orchard, Me., to Santander and Rome in the monoplane Pathfinder.

They were received first at the American Embassy where Charge d'Affaires Norman Armour told them how proud Americans were of their flight.

The aviators then were taken to the ministry of air, where Air Minister Laurent-Eynac welcomed them in the name of France and discussed with them their flight.

The crew of the Yellow Bird and Pathfinder, who were so long comrades before the takeoff from Old Orchard, were reunited at luncheon today.

Belgrade, Jugoslavia, July 18 (AP)—Two Croatian leaders, Antoa Pavelich, of the federalist party, and his aide, Gustav Pertcheff, have been sentenced to death for conspiring against the state with the Macedonian extremists in Bulgaria. WHITE HOUSE ECONOMY SETS AN EXAMPLE

Washington, July 18 (AP)—White House economy caused the executive offices to be the only agency of the Government which expended less money in the fiscal year 1929, which ended June 30 last, than in 1928.

Figures for the 1929 fiscal year issued by the Treasury showed that the expenditures in the executive offices amounted to $487,250, as compared with $589,497 for the previous year, while the total expenditures by governmental departments aggregated $2,106,503,130, an increase of $153,176,089.

The total government expenditures out of ordinary receipts amounted to $3,845,465,189, an increase of $204,943,314 over the previous year.

The expenditures of the departments for 1929 and 1928 were:

	1929	1928

Veterans' bureau	417,380,404	401,234,819

Under the postoffice department was included the $42,000,000 allowed railroads for retroactive mail rate increases which covered a three-year period.

The independent offices and commissions expended $40,000,000, an incease of about $5,000,000, and the expenses for the District of Columbia amounted to $40,000,000, an increase of slightly less than a million dollars.

The total amount of public debt expenditures that came out of the ordinary receipts last year amounted to $549,603,703, as compared with $540,255,026 in the previous year.

BUILDING STOP THREATENS BROCKTON

Brockton, July 18—Brockton is facing a general cessation of building operations, and what started out to be a banner year in this city shows every indication of being mighty lean. The controversy between the Building Laborers' Union and the Master Builders' Association, which resulted in a strike of the masons' tenders and hod carriers seven weeks ago, has already halted work on several jobs, and unless a settlement is reached in a day or two all building will stop.

The Masters at a meeting came near passing such a vote. Several wanted to suspend entirely, but others were able to halt definite action, still, members of the organization say that there is little hope.

At present there are about 30 large contracts tied up, besides scores of smaller buildings. One of the most important is the War Memorial Building on West Elm st., which is to cost about $200,000. The masons are ready to go ahead, but there are no tenders, hence the tie-up.

Work at the new court house costing $350,000 was halted several weeks ago, and the same is true of the Majestic Realty Company building on Main st., on the site of the old St. Patrick's Church. The proposed Montgomery-Ward building on Parkway will have to be deferred if the strike continues.

The hod carriers have been idle for seven weeks. They are seeking an hourly wage of 95 cents, which is an increase of 10 cents an hour. No demand has been made for shorter hours, the men being satisfied with a 44-hour week.

A conference has been arranged between a committee from the Master Builders' Association and the Building Trades Council, and if no agreement can be reached at that conference the general cessation order is apt to go into effect. There are 100 members of the Master Builders' Association.

Two-and-Half-Year Term for Theft of 30 Cents

Springfield, July 18—Caught in the act of taking a purse containing 30 cents at a circus here, Peter Smith of Toledo, O., was sentenced to two and a half years in jail.

Convinced Dracut Woman Shot Self

Dracut, July 18—Convinced that Mrs. Irene Jones shot herself in an attempt at suicide, police today closed the investigation begun yesterday when she was found wounded in her home here.

Police Chief William C. Conole declared the story told by Mrs. Jones' 14-year-old adopted daughter, Gladys, was substantiated by the woman herself, whose condition today at Lowell Corporation Hospital was considerably improved. The girl said her foster-mother shot herself while lying in bed.

JOHNNY WILSON BAIL CUT TO $30,000

New York, July 18—Bail for Johnny Wilson, former middleweight boxing champion, held as a material witness in the murder of Frank Marlow, racketeer, was cut from $50,000 to $30,000 by judge Frank F. Adel in Queens county court after the fighter's lawyer threatened to force the police and district attorney's office to disclose their evidence.

A short time before Judge Adel granted the reduction in bail he received from the grand jury indictments against two other material witnesses in the Marlow case for violation of the Sullivan law. They were Daniel Grosso and Nicholas McDermott, gunmen who were seized by detectives in a garrisoned apartment in Queens a few days after Marlow's body was found beside a roadside in Queens, June 24. Grosso is wanted in New Jersey for a mail robbery and murder.

Wilson was brought to the Queens County court from the Tombs by Detectives Harry Devlin and Frank Wilson. He was suffering when he entered the courtroom, hiding his face from photographers behind a soiled Panama hat.

Reilly opened his argument by demanding that the order holding his client be vacated or that bail be reduced to $10,000. No defendant is being held for the murder, the lawyer pointed out, and thus far he declared there has been no proof of the materiality of Wilson's testimony.

Society Gathers for Rawls-Pitney Nuptials

Smart Set Gathering at Beverly Farms for the Nuptials of Mrs. John B. Pitney

NOT WITHOUT ITS IMPORTANT nuptials is the North Shore to be this season, for on Saturday at noon Mrs. John B. Pitney (Francise Williams) will be wed to Huston Rawls at a simple ceremony in St. Margaret's Church at Beverly Farms. Only the family members will witness the ceremony, but later in the afternoon, at an elaborate reception, smart colonists have been invited to Edgewater House, the Beverly Farms summer home of the bride's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leiter of Washington and Chicago.

AN AFTERNOON DRESS OF hydrangea blue chiffon with hat to match will be Mrs. Pitney's bridal costume, simple, but effective. Pre-nuptial affairs are two in number; tomorrow night Mrs. Bryce J. Allan of Allanbank, Beverly Cove, will give a dinner, and the Russell Burrages of Brooklandwood, Beverly Farms, will also entertain at dinner, to be followed by dancing, in honor of the out-of-town guests. They are many in numbers, and all have been housed on the North Shore.

AN IMPRESSIVE LIST OF wedding guests includes Mrs. Frederick A. Sterling, wife of the American minister to the Irish Free State, who has come from Dublin for the occasion (she is a sister to the bride); Mrs. William M. Rawls, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Gillespie, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Fox, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Winmill, George Sloan and William M. Bertles of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Mason P. Rumnay, the Addison Holtons, Mrs. C. R. Murphy, J. M. Mattingly and Arthur Gardner of Detroit, Mich.; Miss Emily Burton of Cincinnati, and R. E. Jennings of Chicago. Mr. Bertles is to be best man.

FROM WASHINGTON COME the bride's mother, Mrs. John R. Williams, the Henry B. Spencers and daughter, the John F. Wilkins and Miss Kitty Wilkins, the Philip O. Coffins, Mrs. James F. Curtis, Cleveland Perkins, Lieut.-Col. Marion Howze, Mrs. Ormsby McCammon and Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Kerr. Among the North Shore guests, the smartest of the summerites, are included Mrs. Leiter, a handsome woman, gracious and fascinating, who is a Chicagoan by preference when not devoted to continental excursioning. Only a few days ago she arrived at Edgewater House to place her stamp of approval on the readied estate, which in two days will receive the bridal guests.

MRS. LEITER AND THE bride-to-be are daughters of the late Colonel and Mrs. John H. Williams of Washington. Mr. Rawls is the son of Mrs. William Rawls of New York. He was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1915 His club affiliations on Long Island include Nassau Country Club, Aviation Country Club, Turf and Field, Bankers of New York and Detroit, Bloomfield and Warrenton Hunts, University and Old Club of Detroit.

A BLAZE WITH COLOR AND echoing with happy voices was the spreading green acres of Rockmaple, the summer estate of Mrs. George von L. Meyer, with its white tents, farmerettes, sunken tea garden, novelty dog show, Parisian-garbed purchasers and all very willing customers. The North Shore colony turned out en masse yesterday to do their bit for Christ Church, Hamilton-Wenham, show their prized canines and exchange pleasantries with their friends and relatives of the Social Register. The grab, a special delight to the youngsters, was ruled by the captivating Mrs. Grafton Smith (Janice Vaughan) and Mrs. Alex Shaw, both appropriately garbed in linen overalls, the most accepted sartorial craze for beach and knockabout wear. Orange was the color selected by Mrs. Smith, while blue was paraded to excellent advantage by her co-worker. Mrs. Shaw wore the largest hat any one did ever see, a Parisian import, obtained especially for the occasion.

BETTY BARRELL WAS A charming tea hostess. She arrived early and worked late, placing the pond lilies just so in the delightful Italian garden, before rushing off to change clothes and smooth down her soft, brown hair that she might supervise her bevy of deb-waitresses. Betty is such an attractive picture. Would that I were an artist when I watched her slip off her multi-colored linen slippers and step into the shallow waters of the garden to set that lily picture in its water frame.

THOSE TWO ATTRACTIVE girls, Jean Sears and Mrs. Richard C. Storey, Jr. (Mabel Thayer), sat behind the toy table most of the afternoon, both garbed in white, with protecting straws. Alicia Rodgers, Mrs. Meyer's granddaughter, was an early worker, and did much to display the linen on the table over which she ruled. Miss Alicia comes to the Shore every summer from Washington. In October she will go to Europe with Mrs. Meyer, to remain at Rome for a year to study.

FOR THE YOUNG TUCKERMANS, Sortwells, Minots, George von L. Meyer, 3d, and Charles Appleton Meyer, and many others, the fair proved a great treat. Cynthia Sortwell came with Rubber, a Great Dane, whose slender lines rose in towering comparison to the small frame of this young lady. The Welldon girls, Janet, Angela and Mary, brought their two dogs and showed them. Janet and Angela were garbed alike in white, with blue shoulder kerchiefs and ribbon to match in their straw hats. Sister Mary wore soft beige.

THEN, TOO, THE CODMAN twins in powder blue sport dresses. They arrived with their mother, Mrs. Julian Codman, and left with her. Betty Moulton, to be wed on September 7, exhibited her dog. White and black chiffon print did she choose to wear this warm day, the pink facing of a large black straw being the only color relief. White was the toute ensemble effect of Mrs. A. Lynde Cochrane, who was accompanied by her five interesting youngsters. The Cochrane estate is across the road from Rockmaple. Mrs. J. H. Ingalls, Jr., I saw relieving the warmth with the cooling freshness of ice cream cones, her husband by her side doing likewise.

MANY WERE THE EXPRESsions of sympathy extended to Mrs. Francis P. Sears, who recently sprained her ankle. She simply had to come to this annual event. Among others I saw the tall Consuelo Bates, recently a house guest at Castle Hill, the Crane estate; Mrs. Frederic Ayer and her young daughter, Ann Proctor Ayer; Natalie Folsom, Mrs. George von L. Meyer, Jr., Katharine Burrage and Mrs. Dexter Hunneman.

Betty Alden

North Shore society turned out en masse for the colorful fair at Rockmaple, the Hamilton estate of Mrs. George von L. Meyer in aid of Christ Church. Becomingly garbed in overalls, Mrs. Grafton Smith (Janice Vaughan) demonstrated her sales ability on other members of the smart set.

Natalie Folsom was another of the pretty salesforce at the fair. She specialized in flowers, and, just to help things along, Mrs. George von L. Meyer, herself, lined up as a purchaser. The natural beauty of the estate was enhanced by the picturesque costumes affected by the debs and smart young matrons who attended.

A. O. H. POST FOR HOLYOKE MAN

Minneapolis, Minn., July 18—John G. O'Connor of Holyoke, State president of the Massachusetts organization of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, was named chairman of the committee on finance of the national organization at the convention here. Because of the great amount of money spent for work of the organization and in gifts to charity and educational enterprises, the position is deemed one of the most important in the organization.

Meanwhile, members of the Women's Auxiliary to the Hibernians of New England States were pushing their campaign for the election of Miss Mary Kinsella of Salem, Mass., as national president. The delegation, which is one of the largest sectional groups here, is working hard for victory in the elections tomorrow and is confident of placing its candidate in the national chair.

There was a colorful banquet in the ballroom of the Nicollet Hotel, convention headquarters, and this was followed by the grand ball.

Delegates will be asked to condemn showing of motion pictures tending to degrade Irish home life and the Catholic religion, according to John O'Dea, former national secretary and editor of the official Hibernian organ. Protests to Congress against the national origins clause will be continued.

Woman's Club Plans Children's Party

The children of St. Paul's parish in Hingham will be guests at a party for them next Saturday by the Hingham Catholic Woman's Club. The event will be held on the parish grounds and will open at 3 o'clock with a doll carriage parade. Miss Agnes Casey is chairman of the committee.

Varied Membership in Women's Clubs

Mrs. Frederick Glazier Smith, chairman of membership of the General Federation, says that the women of America are thinking nationally; that the yearly increase in membership shows a healthy growth in clubs and indicates that the women's club movement is still on the upward trend.

This group of organized women in every community represents the best of American womanhood, she continues, forms the most democratic organization of women in the world.

"The Woman's Club has played a very important part in the community life of our country for more than half a century, and has been the means of gathering women from all parts of the world under the standard of our General Federation of Women's Clubs."

With a favorable report on increased membership in the General Federation, the strength of the club promises a successful future in all undertakings.

"Membership is the pulse of any organization. 'Unity is Diversity' is the motto our far-seeking founders chose as our guide and inspiration. Our members come from all walks of life, from many countries, and have diverse religious as well as political views. The strength of the women's club movement lies in the fact it is non-partisan and non-sectarian.

"Membership in our national organization has shown the rural women and the city women they have the same ideals and purposes. A home is a home whether in the country or in the city, and the woman makes it what it is. The common point of contact is the willingness to serve and a common interest in community welfare, not only local but national and international."

Colburn Pardoned So He Can Wed

The Governor and council commuted the 5-to-12-year State Prison sentence of Frank Colburn for breaking and entering. At the time he was arrested on the charge of breaking and entering he was placed on probation, but when arrested later on a statutory charge the State Prison sentence was given on the original charge, which involved the theft of $100.

Now, says the statement of the council Colburn is desirous of marrying the young woman with whom he was keeping company at the time he was given the sentence.

7 LINDY CLUB BOYS TO GO UP IN PLANE

Tomorrow will be a day in the lives of seven boys of the Boston American Lindbergh Club which they will remember as long as they live, for these boys will take their first ride in a real airplane.

The take-off is set for 4 p. m., eastern daylight saving time, from the East Boston airport. They will fly away in one of the latest models of Travel-air monoplanes. The same type of a plane which Colonel Lindbergh uses in his hops back and forth across the country.

It's going to be some trip, too. Russell N. Boardman, the pilot who has been flying for nearly a decade, promises to give the boys a real trip. Now, boys and girls, why not be ready when we call "contact" again? Get busy and earn a trip in this wonderful plane. If you do not have the details as to how you can earn a trip in the plane, write to the Lindbergh Club at once.

Our model boat construction lessons which begin next Saturday, will be divided into four headings: first the hull; second, the rigging; third, the finish; fourth, instructions on sailing. Under the first heading you will need to bring the hull.

A piece of sugar pine 24 by 5 by 4 may be obtained at the Junior Model Yacht headquarters, room 302, 739 Boylston st. All materials to make these model boats will be sold at cost. But if you have the materials on hand you can obtain a set of templates free. From these templates you can do your tracing and save yourself a great deal of work on the layout of the boat.

Nearly 1000 boys and girls now have joined the Model Yacht Club. You are invited to join too. There's no registration fee or dues. Free instruction on building these boats will be provided for you.

Almost any boy can make a boat, but it takes a very smart boy to sail one and make it win. It is therefore important that you follow through our different lessons, including those on sailing, and it will also be to your advantage to be present at as many weekly sailings as possible. At our first sailing, next Wednesday afternoon, Fred Pigeon, nationally known from a model yacht standpoint, together with other prominent Boston Model Yacht Club members, will be on hand to help you get the best possible performance out of your boats.

Be sure to be present at this first sailing, whether you have a boat or not, because it will give you a good idea of just what this boy-sailing program will be like. Watch the Boston Evening American daily for further announcements and instructions on building model boats.

Here's another list of names of boys and girls who receive a Lindy aviation cloth hat if they write to the Lindbergh Club within one week:

Nearly Blind, to Wed to Insure Future Care

TRAVEL-TOURS-HOTELS-RESORTS

NEW BARGAIN AT NANTASKET

Outstanding in New England today are the advantageous offerings made by the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company—advantageous to that vast public which loves cooling sea trips and the joys of the beach resorts.

The company has just made effective a new bargain for seekers of the pleasures of the shore places reached by steamer voyage. This new step tops the long list of achievements begun by the company and announced by General Manager Frederic L. Lane.

The latest is the further enlarging of the Nantasket Beach Bargain Day feature. This proves so popular after its first announcement by Manager Lane recently that the company has just increased the number of Bargain Days.

On these days reduction in fare is enjoyed by the patrons. The company has increased the number of Bargain Days per week to four. The days are—Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. This means that every Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday of this season adults may make the round trip to Nantasket on the company's steamers for 50 cents, while the fare for children between the ages of five and 12 is 25 cents.

It is to be remembered also that the company adds a further advantage to these tickets—they include free admission to Paragon Park. On these Bargain Days, the company sells strip tickets for admission to all—yes, all, every one of them—amusements at Paragon Park, for only 50 cents.

The park is bigger and better than ever, and for the children particularly is the dream spot for fun. The company has also reduced its fares for the noted "Triangle Sea Trips." These are the water journeys via the company's palatial steamers to Salem Willows and Nantasket. The steamers sail from Rowe's Wharf at 10:30 o'clock in the morning, on three days of the week—Wednesdays, Thursdays and Sundays.

Patrons may remain at the Willows, or may sail on to Nantasket Beach, enjoy all the pleasures there, with free admission to Paragon Park, and then may return to Boston on any steamer of the company, or may sail back to the Willows and come thence via steamer to Boston the same evening.

There are the Mayflower sailings weekday evenings from Rowe's Wharf. These are the unsurpassed dine and dance trips. The steamer leaves the pier at 8:30 p. m. and returns at 11 p. m., but dancing continues aboard ship until midnight. The company provides parking space at Rowe's Wharf, available after 7 p. m.

The Mayflower Commodores Orchestra has become a famous band, known to hundreds of thousands of radio fans. It is the orchestra that dispenses the music for the dances on the ship. Its repertoire is sing and offer specialities; and, in addition to their good music, there is the opportunity of dining aboard.

This is the biggest season in the history of the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company. It is a long and epochal history.

They help to make the sail to Nantasket enjoyable, and make a big hit with passengers.

REDEDICATE OLD LOCOMOTIVE

A new era in the recreational development of New Hampshire and of New England will be inaugurated at the base of Mt. Washington next Saturday afternoon, in the rededication of "Old Peppersass," the world's first mountain climbing locomotive.

After an absence of 35 years, Peppersass is being brought back to her native mountainsides by President George Hanauer of the Boston & Maine Railroad. She will be sent up the mountain again in a blaze of glory, cheered by a dozen governors from the four corners of the country and hundreds of other guests, and then placed on a pedestal at Bretton Woods.

Peppersass' life of 63 years has witnessed the development of the White Mountains from a resort area providing scant accommodations for a few hundred to one providing the ultimate in hospitality.

U. S. TOURISTS INCREASE

Fredericton, N. B., July 18—Statistics gathered by the New Brunswick Government Bureau of Information and Tourist Travel show an increase of 25 per cent in the number of motor tourists from United States entering Canada at border points of this province.

The number of United States automobiles that entered New Brunswick this season up to June 30 was 167,361, according to returns received by the bureau from the collectors of national revenue at 23 ports of entry in this province.

Of this number 5533 were granted tourists permits for stops of periods up to 60 days, as compared with 4400 similar permits issued up to the same date last year.

That New Brunswick has been able to show such a large increase when the weather was unpropitious because of rains, indicates this province is reaping the benefit of the most extensive and aggressive advertising campaign for tourist travel ever undertaken by New Brunswick.

Prendergast Club Elects Officers

At the first meeting of the Prendergast Health Club at the Prendergast Preventorium, Miss Ruth Johansen was chosen president, Miss Emma Elliot vice president, and Mrs. Dorothy Edwards, follow-up workers of the Boston Tuberculosis Association, secretary.

Seventeen members were enrolled. Mrs. Edwards gave a short talk on the value of rest during the day and going to bed early nights. This was discussed by the girls.

BOY SCOUTS OFF FOR EUROPE

Montreal, July 18—Thirteen hundred American boys are pilgrimaging to England this summer to take part in the greatest peacetime encampment of boys that the world has ever known.

Three hundred and fifty of the American representation will sail from this port tomorrow aboard the new 20,000-ton Canadian-Pacific Liner Duchess of York.

The group will be the official representatives of the Boy Scouts of America at the World Jamboree to be held at Birkenhead, across the Mersey river from Liverpool, England, from July 31 to August 13. Sixty thousand boy Scouts representing 42 different nations and 72 different bands will pitch their tents and for two weeks will work and play together.

The World Jamboree is being held to celebrate the 21st birthday of the founding of the Boy Scout movement and also to pay tribute to Sir Robert Baden-Powell, chief scout of the world, its founder. More than 400 acres of land will be under canvas when the World Jamboree opens on July 31.

Franzeim on Staff of Maplewood Hotel

Norman A. Franzeim, for years connected in an official capacity with the North Bennet Street Industrial School of Boston, has been appointed assistant manager in charge of personnel and service at the Maplewood Hotel, Maplewood, N. H.

Franzeim is particularly well-known in these parts as a pioneer in the development and operation of Caddy Camps, in addition to having been active for years in hotel service in the White Mountains, Maine and Pinehurst, N. C. He was also prominently associated in later years with the veteran hotel man, F. C. Abbe.

REDEDICATE OLD LOCOMOTIVE

A new era in the recreational development of New Hampshire and of New England will be inaugurated at the base of Mt. Washington next Saturday afternoon, in the rededication of "Old Peppersass," the world's first mountain climbing locomotive.

After an absence of 35 years, Peppersass is being brought back to her native mountainsides by President George Hanauer of the Boston & Maine Railroad. She will be sent up the mountain again in a blaze of glory, cheered by a dozen governors from the four corners of the country and hundreds of other guests, and then placed on a pedestal at Bretton Woods.

Peppersass' life of 63 years has witnessed the development of the White Mountains from a resort area providing scant accommodations for a few hundred to one providing the ultimate in hospitality.

U. S. TOURISTS INCREASE

Fredericton, N. B., July 18—Statistics gathered by the New Brunswick Government Bureau of Information and Tourist Travel show an increase of 25 per cent in the number of motor tourists from United States entering Canada at border points of this province.

The number of United States automobiles that entered New Brunswick this season up to June 30 was 167,361, according to returns received by the bureau from the collectors of national revenue at 23 ports of entry in this province.

Of this number 5533 were granted tourists permits for stops of periods up to 60 days, as compared with 4400 similar permits issued up to the same date last year.

That New Brunswick has been able to show such a large increase when the weather was unpropitious because of rains, indicates this province is reaping the benefit of the most extensive and aggressive advertising campaign for tourist travel ever undertaken by New Brunswick.

Praise for Thore, Protector of Dogs

Editor Boston American:

How thoughtful of Wendell Phillips Thore of Quincy to come to the defense of Quincy dogs in the manner described in the Boston Evening American. His statement that he will hold any Quincy policeman to account if he kills a dog merely because it is unlicensed deserves the commendation of all who have a warm spot in their hearts for dogs.

Too bad there aren't more Theres in this broad land of ours.

How true it is, as pointed out by Mr. Thore, that the absence of a collar on is no proof the dog is not licensed. As any lover of fine animals knows, dogs frequently slip their collars. Is a policeman going to shoot valuable dogs merely because they do not wear collars? I hops that such a fate does not come to my fine airedale, which I regard as far more intelligent than many humans with whom I come in contact.

If I had my way, every young child would be given a puppy to bring up and play with. No child could have a finer companion than a good dog.

Another thing, if every case of dog biting humans was investigated I feel that in a majority it would be learned that the dogs had been ill-treated or teased. A good dog will seldom bite a person unless abused.

More power to you, Mr. Thore! Keep up the good work. You deserve praise for what you are endeavoring to do. D. W.

18-Day Diet Was Too Hard on Her System

Editor Boston American:

The 18-day diet may be all right and a good thing for those who can stand it. I can't. With two other women in my neighborhood I started the diet on July 4, more for a lark than anything else, for they wanted company. I weighed only 142 pounds, which was just about right for my height.

During the first four days I was actually starving for want of good solid substantial food. I felt weak, but decided to stick it out because my friends were doing the same. In a week I lost only one pound. My friends lost three and three and one-half pounds respectively.

At the start of the second week I seemed to lose my desire for any food, and on the 10th day I fainted in my home. My husband called our family doctor, who put me to bed and insisted that I stay there an entire day, drinking warm milk only at first and then eating good solid foods. I gave up the diet, of course.

Ant Problem Vexes Another Housewife

Editor Boston American:

As a resident of Brighton, near the reservoir, I was very interested to read of the troubles of a Cleveland circle housewife regarding ants and bugs in her first floor apartment. I have similar troubles, but learned the cause. These ants come from the thousands of ant hills near the reservoir and these insects seem to have an explorative tendency. Other people in the neighborhood are bothered. Unless our landlords can cope with the situation they will not be able to keep first floors rented.

I, too, would like to know what the law is about sanitary apartments.

While I am on the subject, I would like to point out that in fencing around the reservoir the authorities fenced in the best part but left to the public only the ant-infested hills.
Brighton. Mrs. F. C. M.

Modern Daughter Puzzles Mother

Editor Boston American:

As a parent of a 17-year-old girl, I have a problem which I do not know how to meet—perhaps other mothers will kindly advise me. My daughter, who I am sure has high standards of personal morality, has joined a set of young people. Their latest thrill is for a girl and a man to go by train to New York at noon, taking in a dinner, theater, and dance until late. The couple then return to Boston on an early morning train, called a "milk" train.

These "two-some" trips are entirely unchaperoned, and my child has never yet failed to give me a frank report. She assures me that I am old-fashioned in protesting, as in this modern age such a trip is "quite the thing."

I am trying hard to see my daughter's viewpoint, for in my day such a trip would be unthinkable. Yet, I realize that times and standards have changed amazingly.

Will some other mother advise me how to meet this problem?
Pawtucket, R. I. MOTHER.

Why the Difference in Price of Bread?

Editor Boston American:

Why is it that we must pay 12 cents for a loaf of bread at some stores, and yet obtain an equally good loaf at various chain stores for as low as eight cents? Arthur Brisbane says that 45 chain stores did nearly $250,000,000 business last year, which proves that the chain store institution is as much with us as the poor of the Bible.

Snake Bites Charmer She Hides Her Injury

New York, July 18 (AP)—Bitten by one of her pets, Mrs. Belle Oenits Walker, Coney Island snake charmer, was under treatment at Fordham Hospital today.

Mrs. Walker hid her injury from the crowd of spectators gathered about her booth. After obtaining antitoxin treatment she went to the hospital. She said it was her first accident in 20 years and that the snake, a six-foot rattler, slipped from her grasp when she tried to wave some children away.

2 Killed, Many Hurt in New Mexico Wreck

Alamosa, Colo., July 18—John Reddington, engineer, of Chama, N. M. and John Fish, fireman of Alamosa, were killed and a number of passengers injured when a Denver & Rio Grande Western train en route to Santa Fe was derailed on Batanea Hill, 60 miles southwest of Alamosa in New Mexico.

Editors Will Appeal Contempt Sentence

Cleveland, O., July 18 (AP)—Freed from county jail on bond, Louis B. Seltzer, editor of the Cleveland Press and Carlton K. Matson, chief editorial writer, today awaited a hearing some time hence on an appeal from a ruling by Common Pleas Judge Frederick P. Walther finding them in contempt for an editorial attacking an order of his court. He had fined them $500 each and sentenced them to jail for 30 days.

EVENING New York Stocks AMERICAN News of Street MARKETS

TREND IN BIG INDUSTRIES REVIEWED

Steel—Production, although dropping slightly from the high May average, has set a June record and a new high for any month's output the first half year. Decrease in orders from automobile manufacturers has not affected insistent demand in other quarters and back-logs, while slightly diminished, maintain fair proportions. Third quarter buying continues apace with price slightly lower.

Metals—Domestic and foreign demand for copper has shown an increase due possibly to declines in stocks in consumers' hands. Price is apparently stabilized at 18c. and if the large producers continue curtailal schedules there should be no change in this market for some time. Lead sales are showing an upward tendency. Zinc remains quiet but steady.

Rails—Conservation efforts still hold the center of the stage in this industry with eventual success hoped for by the railroad executive. In the meantime production continues to achieve new peaks and price structure remains adequate. In the meantime production continues to achieve new peaks and price structure remains adequate to weakening despite increasingly heavy consumption.

Aviation—Recent important mergers confirm the tendency of consolidation of producing, distributing and operating branches. The trend is clearly toward the elimination of weaker units and formation of a few large combinations which will dominate the industry.

Electrical Equipment — Recent and prospective utility mergers are expected to add to the present heavy demand in this field. Production has continued at a remarkably high level and a record half year is predicted. Profit margins for the large interests are gratifying despite heavy foreign and domestic competition.

Tobacco—Earnings gains of the major companies for the first half year reflect increasing production and sales records of cigarettes. Consumption is being further stimulated by price reductions in popular brands by leading retailers and promises to set a new high this year.

Chemicals—Current heavy sales of industrial chemicals are more than compensated for the decline earlier in the year and record earnings are expected for the first half. The present upward trend will depend entirely on continued general industrial activity.

Shipbuilding—Revival of activity in this industry is explained by need of heavy tonnages for replacement in American lines and is not likely to be sustained for any extended period.

Summary—The close of the second quarter finds many records set by the more prosperous industries and apparent stabilization at lower levels in the less favored lines. Discounting the summer slump, prospects are fair that the momentum furnished by a bullish first half, should carry activity through the third period with only slight decrease.

COAL PRICES ARE STEADY

New York, July 18—While demand for bituminous coal underwent but little change in the past month, prices held a fairly steady course. Business conditions throughout the country are favorable and this is expected to lead to an increased demand in the near future, Coal Age reports. The weighted average spot price for June was $1.67½ per ton, f.o.b. mines, as against $1.67½ in the preceding month.

A feature in the situation was the steady movement of bituminous coal to the lakes, the rate being slightly higher than in the corresponding period last year. Production continues ahead of last year.

Anthracite maintained practically as even tone throughout the month of June, though slight weakness were reported in some localities. Curtailed production kept the output moving fairly satisfactorily and prevented the piling up of surpluses in any one size. The scheduled advance in prices as the fall season approaches should stimulate domestic demand.

Eltington Schild Co. Earns $1.84 a Share

Eltingon Schild Co., Inc., reports net profits for the six months' period from December 1, 1928 to May 31, 1929, of $1,131,565, after depreciation, reserve for Federal income taxes, and other reserves, but before interest of minority stockholders of Krushal & Kruskal, Inc., in the profits of that business. Net profits amount to 7.42 times dividend requirements on the company's first preferred stock for this period, and after deducting dividend requirements on all preferred stocks, amounts to $1.84 per share for six months on the 461,183 5-7 shares of common stock outstanding May 31, 1929.

This compares with net profits of $1,114,726 for the corresponding period of last year, equivalent to 6.85 times dividend requirements on the company's first preferred stock and after deducting dividend requirements on all preferred stock, equivalent to $1.83 per share on the 448,327 shares of common stock then outstanding.

Experts See Crisis in Weak Regulation of Utilities

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, July 18—The attempt in recent weeks of stock market operators to turn the shares of public utility companies into footballs of speculation is symptomatic of radical changes impending in the electric light and power industry.

The new confidences shown in securities of that group, however exaggerated, are more than a mere expression of hopefulness by the lunatic fringe in Wall Street. It represents an attempt by small speculators to follow the most authoritative leaders in the financial district. Such speculation was enormously stimulated by the role played by J. P. Morgan & Co. in the formation of three powerful new light holding companies, the United Corporation, the Commonwealth & Southern, and the Niagara-Hudson.

Impetus to buying of utilities was also given by the St. Louis & O'Fallon Railroad decision, which further committed the United States Supreme Court to the doctrine that valuation should take consideration reproduction costs. Another incentive to haste in remaking the public utility map was a desire to take advantage of the present period of burdensome restrictive legislation.

Furthermore, there is a growing realization that the power industry is weakening despite increasingly heavy consumption.

Investors in important mergers confirm the tendency of consolidation of producing, distributing and operating branches. The trend is clearly toward the elimination of weaker units and formation of a few large combinations which will dominate the industry.

Electrical Equipment — Recent and prospective utility mergers are expected to add to the present heavy demand in this field. Production has continued at a remarkably high level and a record half year is predicted. Profit margins for the large interests are gratifying despite heavy foreign and domestic competition.

Tobacco—Earnings gains of the major companies for the first half year reflect increasing production and sales records of cigarettes. Consumption is being further stimulated by price reductions in popular brands by leading retailers and promises to set a new high this year.

Chemicals—Current heavy sales of industrial chemicals are more than compensated for the decline earlier in the year and record earnings are expected for the first half. The present upward trend will depend entirely on continued general industrial activity.

Shipbuilding—Revival of activity in this industry is explained by need of heavy tonnages for replacement in American lines and is not likely to be sustained for any extended period.

Summary—The close of the second quarter finds many records set by the more prosperous industries and apparent stabilization at lower levels in the less favored lines. Discounting the summer slump, prospects are fair that the momentum furnished by a bullish first half, should carry activity through the third period with only slight decrease.

Bu. if these authorities were fully equal to their task there would still remain an appreciable area of public utility operation subject to no control or supervision whatsoever. Examples are the involved structures of holding companies, which now practically dominate operating concerns, and the whole range of interstate activities, except recent and future developments on the national waterways.

"Finally there is a series of basic decisions which are bound to be made in the courts in the near future that will have a determining effect on the relations between the industry and the public it serves. Among these may be cited the Supreme Court's ultimate decision as to the basis on which confiscatory rates for rate-making purposes.

As alternatives to the present system of mild and allegedly ineffective regulation, Dr. Mosher discusses briefly the penalty experiment of the Massachusetts Commission of using contracts as a basis for stabilizing the industry. Dr. Mosher thinks that the contract system is the most promising and eliminates controversy and uncertainty concerning costs of utility properties, and the confidential presentation resulting from the absence of standard rate schedules and accounting methods.

Dr. Mosher also alludes to the Ontario system of government ownership of utilities and to the new British program for integrating public and privately owned plants under a central power commission.

In reading a lesson to American financiers and engineers, Dr. Mosher concludes: "What is at stake is not the avoidance of flagrant dishonesty and actual misdeeds, but rather a restatement of the philosophy of public utility services in the light of present day changing standards and ideals of the day.

"Under leadership imbued with such a philosophy, secrecy would be taboo, resistance to reasonable control would vanish, publicity would be honest and above board and the public would automatically supply its proper share in increased efficiency and improved organization without having constantly to take recourse to commissions and courts."

Views of Wall Street

By JULIUS G. BERENS

Lackawanna a Favored Rail

BUYING of the highest-grade character has come into Delaware, Lackawanna & Western. It is based on well-founded expectation that this stock may be one of the star performers in the railroad group. The Lackawanna is in the strategic position of being desired by most of the big systems of the East and it is a forgone conclusion that its independence will be necessary to win control. The Lackawanna standing on its own is one of the most successful roads in the country and to the large systems it would furnish a valuable new link.

Banking buying of a quiet nature is noticeable in some of the better-grade oil shares.

General Motors Net May Be Disappointing

ADVICES from Detroit are to the effect that General Motors' net earnings for the second quarter failed to equal expectations. While a net equal to over $2 a share for this period is generally forecast, the latest opinion is that it may be below $1.90. Steady pressure on motors is a reflection of widespread opinion in the industry that, based on last year's showing of 60 per cent of the full year's earnings in the first six months, the 1929 net may be $5.75 a share or less.

General market presents a tired appearance which is somewhat hidden by activity of a limited group.

Macy May Vote Another Melon

DIRECTORS of R. H. Macy & Co. are reported considering a new offering of stock on terms which may be fully as attractive and valuable as the last financing. Late last year stockholders were allowed to purchase two new shares at $10 each for every old share they owned.

Continental Insurance has always been partial to railroad stocks.

Hershey Prepared in Demand

BANKING buying is noticeable in Hershey Chocolate preferred stock, which combines the qualities of an investment issue with the speculative possibilities of a common stock. The preferred is convertible into the common share for share and also is entitled to extra dividends when earnings warrant. It is said that the common is earning at the rate of better than $9 a share.

Skelly Oil's Performance

THOSE who have been most active in Skelly Oil point to its very pronounced action in relation to the remainder of the oil group. Within the past few months Skelly has passed in price seven other oil shares. The present resumed activity is apparently directed toward placing the shares through its former high, but considerable stock must first be absorbed.

For those who believe a great railroad market will develop, the railroad investment trusts like Alleghany Corporation and Pennroad Corporation should be attractive.

Worcester awarded to Mechanics National Bank, Worcester, at 5.085 per cent $800,000 notes dated July 18 and due $400,000 respectively Nov. 27, 1929, and Feb. 19, 1930. Other bidders were: Salomon Bros. & Hutzler 5.09 per cent plus 53; First National Bank of Boston 5.165 per cent; Shawmut Corporation 5.18 per cent; F. S. YOUNGSTOWN Sheet & Tube Co. and subsidiaries had second quarter net income of $6,107,057 against $2,480,891 in same quarter last year.

N. E. POWER'S OUTPUT GAINS 25 PER CENT

New England Power Association, controlled by International Hydro-Electric System, a division of International Paper and Power Company, produced 137,688,000 kilowatt hours of electric energy in June, an increase of 25% over the output of the Association in June, 1928, and 61% over that of June, 1927.

In the first six months of this year the output of New England Power Association was 859,906,000 kilowatt hours, 30% greater than in the corresponding period of 1928, and 64% greater than in the first six months of 1927. The output of Worcester Electric Light Company and of Fall River Electric Light Company—recently acquired companies—are included in the above figures from the first of this year.

GAIN LARGEST HERE

The output of electric energy in the first five months of the present properties of New England Power Association was 14% over the output of the same properties in the first five months of 1928. This compares with an increase of 12% in the output of all public utility power plants in the United States as reported recently by the United States Geological Survey.

For the year ended May 31, the production of electric energy of the present properties of New England Power Association was 16 per cent over that of the first half of 1928.

In the first five months of this year the output of the Worcester company was 19.6 per cent over the corresponding period of 1928, compared with an increase of 10.3 per cent for the rest of Massachusetts based on United States Geological Survey figures.

RECORD ACTIVITY

For the year ended May 31, production of the Worcester company was a 12.4 greater than in the year ended May 31, 1928, while that of the rest of Massachusetts increased 2.9 per cent in the same period.

The average rate of industrial activity in New England during the first half of this year exceeded that of any corresponding period.

One of the noteworthy factors contributing to this was the textile industry, which, from a volume standpoint, has been improving during recent weeks. More cotton was consumed in New England mills in May than in any month since June, 1927.

Connors, Republic Rubber Head, Quits

J. H. Connors, president of the Republic Rubber Co., announced today his resignation which takes effect immediately. Beyond the fact that Mr. Connors is leaving for a vacation in the East no announcement of future plans was made.

The resignation of Mr. Connors was received with regret by the organization, as he has been the central figure in the forward progress of the company since he went to Youngstown with the late E. H. Fitch in 1922.

BUSINESS MEN TO BE AIDED BY SPOFFORD

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor

Charles B. Spofford, Jr., U. S. Trade Commissioner at Calcutta, came to Boston today to aid local business men who wish to secure trade in India. It is a sort of homecoming for Mr. Spofford, who was born in Claremont, N. H.

American merchants should get the notion out of their heads that the Indian market is closed against us by preferential tariffs, for such preferentials not only do not exist but also never existed, according to Commissioner Spofford. Mr. Spofford has been engaged for the past seven years in promoting American trade in India.

Mr. Spofford considers it also essential that Americans give up any preconceived ideas that India is only a price market and that only cheap stuff will sell. The individual purchasing power of the average Indian is admittedly low, he says, but probably no race of people appreciate value for money to a higher degree, and this fact, undoubtedly accounts for the growth of American sales in competition with low-priced merchandise from Europe and Asia.

A number of our products dominate the Indian market despite the fact that their prices are appreciably higher than similar types of merchandise offered by foreign competitors, according to Mr. Spofford. We do over $50,000,000 worth of business with India in from 30 to 40 general classes of goods, he points out. Our success has been largely due to energetic salesmanship, careful attention to shipment details and a reasonable investment for advertising, he declares.

The lines in which American manufacturers have done particularly well in India include all classes of power machinery and electrical goods, mining machinery, hardware, dyestuffs, photographic supplies and motion picture films, petroleum products, aluminum, tin plate, tires, paints and varnishes, canned goods, raw cotton and piece goods, razors and toilet requisites, the Commerce Department foreign representative points out. The market is also developing rapidly, he says, for canvas foot-wear, road machinery, electric refrigerators, artificial leather, hydro-electric plants and certain types of railway equipment. A number of commodities produced in Boston factories are included in the list of articles mentioned.

A notable change in the general outlook of the textile industry, promising a steady rehabilitation of the New England mills, is reported by John J. Martin, president of Exchange Trust Company

"Although the cotton industry in New England is still undergoing a serious depression caused by the development of new producing areas," according to Mr. Martin, "the greatest depth of the depression was passed in 1925, since then forces have been at work to reduce the disparity between the New England mills and those of the South.

"The growth of the Southern mills at the expense of the New England mills was principally due to the saving of cheap labor in the South and the growth in use of coarse fabrics which can be well manufactured by comparatively unskilled labor. Another factor operating against some New England mills has been the conservatism of the management which has been reluctant to discard machinery, even when new processes have rendered it obsolete. The Southern mills, being of comparatively recent construction, have been equipped with the most modern machines.

"New England, on account of the technical skill of the operating staffs, still maintains its supremacy as the manufacturing center of fine goods. It is estimated that New Bedford manufacturers 70 per cent of the fine goods—shirtings, better grade ginghams, lawns, voiles, organdines and marquisettes

Greatest Heritage of the War Is—a Book; Read It

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, July 18—The greatest thing that has come out of the World War is—a book, a book by a common German soldier, a private in the ranks. All he does is tell what he and his pals at the front did, saw, said and felt.

Yet this plain, narrative, really, realistically, nakedly told, will do more to stop war than all the peace conferences, peace treaties, peace societies, leagues of nations, and arbitration courts ever organized.

Compared with this, all other accounts of the war are anemic, superficial, puerile, futile.

The picture Erich Maria Remarque paints burns into one's soul. It inflames one's mind. It haunts one's memory. It is brutal, it is revolting, it is disgusting. The utmost that pulls up is not against the narrator or narrative but against war and all instigators of war, against its sickening brutality and beastiality, against its fiendish barbarities, its wellnigh torture, physical, mental and spiritual it inflicts upon the innocent, helpless, unconsulted victims drawn into this deadly cauldron.

Slightly expurgated, "All Quiet on the Western Front," should be read by or to every schoolboy in every land. Every ruler should have a copy on his breakfast table every morning. Every time a cabinet meets anywhere in the world the book should be ceremoniously placed in front of it.

Then there would be no more wars declared for generations

Here are extracts from a conversation between the soldier-author and his comrades after a pompous visit from the "All-High-est" as they call the Kaiser.

"What I would like to know," says Albert, "is whether there would not have been a war if the Kaiser had said No. If not him alone, then perhaps if 20 or 30 people id the world had said No."

That's probable," I agree, "but they damned well said "Yes."

Tjaden wonders just how a war gets started.

Mostly by one country badly offending another, — Albert explains.

Then Tjaden pretends to be obtuse. "A country? I don't follow. A Mountain in Germany cannot offend a meadow in France. Or a river, or a wood, or a field of wheat."

I don't mean that at all," growls Kropp, "one people offends another—"

Then I haven't any business here at all," replies Tjaden. "I don't feel myself offended. Then I can be going home right away."

And we all laughed.

"Ach, man, I'm not the people as a whole, the state— exclaims Muller.

"State, state—" Tjaden snaps his fingers contemptuously. "Gendarmes, police, taxes, that's your state —if that's what you are talking about, no, thank you . . ."

"And just you consider almost all of us simple folk. And in France, too, the majority of men are laborers, workmen or poor clerks. Now just why should a French blacksmith or a French shoemaker want to attack us? No, it is merely the rulers. I had never seen a Frenchman before I came here, and I will be just the same with the majority of Frenchmen as regards us. They weren't asked about it any more than we were.

"In the branches dead men are hanging like naked soldier in agaric ting in the fork of a tree, he still has his helmet on, otherwise he is entirely naked. There is only half of him sitting up there, the top half, the legs are missing.

"I search further. Here hang bits of uniform, and somewhere else is plastered a bloody mess that is no more recognizable. Over there lies a body with nothing but a piece of the underpants on one leg and the collar of the tunic around its neck. Otherwise it is naked and the clothes are hanging up in the trees. Both arms are missing although they had been pulled out I discover one of them 20 yards off in a shrub."

ST. PAUL DOES WELL, SAYS SCANDRETT

Our July loadings so far are running ahead of a year ago, and if this continues we should expect our earnings for the month to show a gain over last year, said Pres Scandrett of Chicago, Milwaukee, St Paul & Pacific. From present outlook I expect earnings for the quarter to show a good deal corresponding period of 1928.

"General business in our territory is excellent. The recent rise in wheat has increased our grain movement. And there is still some moderate of last year's wheat to be moved.

"Shipments of iron and steel are very heavy. Movement of petroleum and petroleum products is much above a year ago, and the general merchandise traffic. Shipments of automobiles and automobile accessories so far this year have run 30 per cent ahead of the like period of 1928. In part this improvement has been due to increased operations of the Ford plant at St. Paul favorable regulatory legislation, which gave the South her advantage on hand in the South. Under any circumstances however, the coarse cotton industry will be very largely a Southern business, but the Northern mills will compete more successfully in the finer goods

"The Northern mills are paying much more attention to merchandising and styles than before. One of the most important mills has discontinued selling through agents and now maintains its own sales office, in order to cut down sales costs. Another important milling interest is developing business through a nationwide advertising campaign. Some mills are establishing style departments.

"Mill operations so far in 1929 have moderately exceeded those for the same period of 1928. The immediate future is affected to a marked degree by the outlook for the cotton crop. The prospect is for a record-breaking crop of approximately 18,000,000 bales, a larger areas have been planted to cotton than in recent years."

BIG INCREASE IN CAPITAL OF N. Y. BANK

Payment having been made for 300,000 shares of the capital stock sold to the brokers' group headed by Smith & Gallatin, The Continental Bank of New York entered upon the careers' broader service opened to it by the introduction of an additional $15,000,000 into its capital structure and that of its securities affiliate.

The occasion was marked by no formalities or ceremonies of any kind, the only outward evidence of the change being the engrossing and painters' materials brought in to start the alterations which will make the bank's quarters, temporarily at least, adequate for the increased business which is expected to result from its new affiliations. Meanwhile, the bank is arranging for headquarters more in keeping with its enlarged capital structure and activities.

"Now that the detail of putting through the capital increase has been cleared away," said Frederick Hornby, president of the bank, "we are going ahead with concrete plans for the expansion of the bank's business and expect to be able to announce shortly. One phase of the expansion program that has definitely been decided upon is the establishment of a trust department for handling both corporate and personal trusts We also contemplate a real estate transfer department. This will, of course, entail additional executive personnel and we are working on that now.

You cannot take an institution with assets of $200,000,000 a step at a step in less than three months time to an institution with capital of $45,000,000 and surplus and undivided profits of $11,000,000, to make no mention of forming a security company with $5,000,000 paid-in capital, and completely round out your organization simultaneously. We have our program and general program mapped out and now that we have the capital to carry them through we expect to move forward rapidly.

"Already we have experienced a satisfying growth in deposits, starting from the time announcement was made of the plan for forming the new stock and bond group. The final returns show that subscribed nearly more than four hundred stock exchange firms, curb houses, their associates and other Wall Street interests subscribed to the stock offered by the Smith & Gallatin group."

GREAT MERGER OF MILLS IN MAKING

Charlotte, N. C., dispatch to Daily News Record says: Merger of combed and carded cotton yarn mills that would control at least 60 per cent of combed yarn output of southern states is being discussed. A holding concern would acquire all shares of all yarn companies which can be interested in the plan

Engineering and accounting firms under the proposed scheme are to make a fair value on the shares of each individual mill property proposing to enter the holding company arrangement. It is understood, of course, will be given to the liquid assets of each property

Operating heads of each mill property are to be left undisturbed in their positions. This would insure present incumbents of executive position their usual income indefinitely from such positions. Officials of combed yarn and combed yarn mills would be selected from different and directors of the holding company.

The holding company thus would come into control of carded and combed mills of varying capacities, owning widely different equipment, Business coming through according to this plan, is to be allotted to mills best qualified to handle it. The merger plan would eliminate overlapping in production.

As now planned, the holding company would be able to save substantially on cost of sales. It is figured present sales cost is about 11 per cent. Under the new arrangement, it is stated, this would be cut to 1 per cent.

Inquiry made in central markets, it is asserted, reveals that representative sales agencies would be quite willing to handle sales of the holding company for a return to them of 1 per cent on sales. It is said that there would be enough sole competition among yarn selling organizations for a contract to give them exclusive distribution of the output of such a combination at 1 per cent.

FRIGIDAIRE HAS RECORD SIX MONTHS

Dayton, Ohio, July 18.—The best half-year period in the history of Frigidaire Corporation was enjoyed during the first six months of 1929, with increases in shipments of electric refrigeration units ranging from 66 to 112 per cent above those of the same period of 1928, it was announced here today

Shipments of household electric refrigerators showed the greatest increase with a gain of 112 per cent over those for the same period of 1928, Frigidaire water cooler shipments mounted to 82 per cent above those for the corresponding six months of last year

Each successive month saw records of the preceding month surpassed, the production was increased early in the spring when the unprecedented flood of orders poured into Dayton and soon the factories were operating 20 per cent above their normal rated capacities

May's outstanding record of units installed fell before that of June. The latter month figured at 168 per cent. Every record on the books, this General Motors subsidiary was broken during the first half of the year, it was said

The half year also marked a period of engineering achievement. The Frigidaire cold control a device for Frigidaire freezing and preparation of frozen desserts, was introduced; two new household refrigerators were placed on the market at the lowest price in Frigidaire history; an automatic room cooler was announced, and the millionth Frigidaire was manufactured and an entirely new line of electric water coolers for factories, offices, homes and stores was introduced

Export shipments during the six months increased 63 per cent over those of the same period of 1928. More than 100,000 Frigidaire units are now in use overseas and the corporation has representation in 78 countries

MARKET LIKE FEATHER BED, SAYS WRITER

Sobering developments seem to be the little complex on Wall Street, says the market analyst writing in Barron's under the name, "The Trader." He says that the present condition is like pounding a feather bed. a punch in one place simply causes a bulge in another

On the other hand, years ago when stocks reached self-sustaining groups of stocks invariably provoked liquidation or a wave of professional selling. The market days, he says, seems to be too big to permit such efforts. In other words, it is a market of stocks, and not a stock market

The unbridled speculation in public utilities was Barron Weekly, has now reached the point where it is incapable of intelligent and any reasonable valuation or appraisal There is no question that the market is now entering what it may be some time been, in a stage of acute excitement. Money has ceased to be a factor in the market. Credit restrictive influence is being depreciated Such a point of view in Wall Street is nothing new, and it has always occurred in boom times before

However, says Barron's Weekly, in 1919 and 1920 there was no Federal Reserve board discussing call money quotation The call money rate in 1919 Back in 1902 the story was the same on the eve of the 1903 panic

From the cheapest money market in the world New York has become the dearest and its demands are already disturbing international markets

COTTON PRICES ARE MIXED

New York July 18 (AP)—Cotton opened easy today at a rise of 8 points to an advance of 9 points A disposition to take profits following the sharp advance of the trade was promoted by selling easy cables, but the early offerings were readily absorbed by a broadening of demand, which seemed to come from Wall Street, Western and Commission house sources

October later advanced to 19.10 and January to 19.09 making new high ground for the movement and net gains of about 10 to 15 points. Private cables said covering and trade and eastern sections of the belt and the possibility of crop deterioration between now and the end of the month

Private cables said covering and continental buying in Liverpool had been supplied by Hombay Liquidation and profit taking PRES. WILSHIRE of Fleischmann Co., who is to head Standard Brands, Inc., denies that any negotiations have been in progress to take over Fet Milk Co.

MARKET VIEWS OF BROKERS

Brokers' views of the market, made public today, follow.

Spencer Trask & Co.—After the advances which have taken place, sharp reactions are in order. Nothing has developed to disturb our confidence in the position of carefully selected common stocks.

James H Oliphant & Co—Same story of mixed price movements is continuing. Factors will which new highs are made would seem evidence of market vitality. When a speculation goes temporarily stale there has usually been to identify a period of heavy turnover in stocks without much progress in prices

Dr. K. Keech & Co.—At current prices cash is a better asset than many of the speculative issues now ruling at top figures

Hornblower & Weeks—The railroads continued to supply the market with a constructive background, and we believe that this department offers the most attractive means of speculation. We would continue to follow the leading rails bought on our previous recommendations, expecting them to carry on.

Gosnold Mill in Improved Earnings

New Bedford, July 18.—Earnings of Gosnold Mill for past six months have been such that banks have agreed that only $330,000 of term notes need be floated in reorganization and the entire $600,000 of bank loans can remain.

This brought modification of reorganization when officers met to make final draft in Boston Tuesday, and only one note can be figured with each share of new common. Instead of one and one-fourth. Two shares of new common go with each note, so that the ultimate capital will be 9900 common instead of 11 550. Another change is that new preferred will not be participating. Stockholders will probably meet in New Bedford August 6 to ratify.

INDUSTRIAL MACHINERY MART GROWS

The expansion of the automobile, rubber, petroleum, iron and other industries in the New England and East Indies is causing a steadily increasing demand for various types of industrial machinery, according to Trade Commissioner Donald Renshaw in the comprehensive analysis of that market just released by the Department of Commerce.

The Netherlands East Indies alone are of which Java and Sumatra are the largest and most important, have been a source of industrial machinery imported chiefly from the United States, the bulk of which is supplied by Dutch and German agencies. Great Britain was formerly a dominant factor in many lines but of late years British exporters have lost in only two years, the rubber machine. Both of these industries are reported to be heavily controlled by American interests. Particularly, are preference to their own nationals. The German firm of Krupp has also a large share of the mining field, with [illegible] taken over the bulk of the German machinery trade. Washington, July 18 (AP)—The Commerce Department has established an aeronautics trade division to aid American manufacturers of airplanes and accessories to develop foreign markets in charge of Leighton W. Rogers, formerly American commercial attache at several European capitals.

PUZZLE AWARDS WON BY WOMEN

The old adage, "He who laughs last laughs best," still holds true, even if you work crossword puzzles, especially the Distinguished American crossword puzzles, in connection with which the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser are offering $200 each for the best solutions.

It seems that when Miss Clara A. Manning, 1560 Commonwealth ave., Brighton, began working and solving the Distinguished American crossword puzzles the first week they appeared in the Boston Evening American her friends gave her the "ha-ha."

"Why waste your time doing 'em. You'll never win one of those awards. They know who is going to win the money before they start," friends told Miss Manning.

But the laugh is on them. Miss Manning, who is principal of Center school in Middleton, won the first cash award of $100 in the first series. She called at the Boston Evening American office yesterday and received her award.

"And to think how they joked and chided me when I took my puzzles down to the beach to work during my odd moments. The joke is certainly on them now," she said when she was handed her $100 award.

Vanishes From Court After 3-Year Search

Anna Scott Pearson, from parts unknown stepped quietly into the probate court of Suffolk County, took the witness stand before Judge Prest, gave a few lines of testimony, and said: "I am a fugitive from justice." She stepped quietly to the door of the court room, and, met there by three men who placed themselves about her disappeared as quickly into parts unknown.

For three years her attorney Charles S. O'Connor, had searched for her in this State and in New York. He had sent 30 letters to addresses she had given. All were returned unopened. Last March he sent eight letters to persons he had known of in the South End. Seven came back unopened. The eighth brought an anonymous reply, saying the woman would be produced on the day appointed for a hearing of her claim to the estate of her husband, the late Harry Waychie, whom she married at Providence, Feb. 26, 1927.

As she stepped from the probate court, she was not arrested, for there was no warrant on which to arrest her there. It is understood she is wanted for jumping bail in the municipal court, where there is a charge against her of larceny from a Boston department store.

She testified she married Waychie and knew nothing of a previous marriage of his; she declined to tell Judge Prest where she lived in Boston and New York and other places, declined to tell why she left her husband. She said he was good to her and gave her much money and many clothes.

"ALL QUIET on the WESTERN FRONT," by ERICH MARIA REMARQUE

Read This First

PLUNGED from school into the maelstrom of the World War, four 19-year-old Germans set out for the Western Front with a keen zest for the glory they imagine awaits them. They are Paul Baumer, author; Albert Kroop; Mutler, who continues to dream of school amid the muck of the trenches, and Leer, who sports a full board and has a preference for the girls.

Bombarded by British artillery, their company of 150 men goes into an engagement and returns only 80 strong.

The four visit Kemmerich, a wounded friend, in the dressing station. He complains of a horrible pain in the foot. The visitors know what he has not yet been told—his leg has been amputated. He is dying.

Muller seizes upon a pair of English airman's boots owned by Kemmerich. He asks for them; Kemmerich will never need them again, even should he recover. Kemmerich steadfastly refuses to give them up, believing both his limbs are sound.

Paul and his three comrades, hardened for the front by the abuse and persecution of their training camp corporal, Himelstoss, are now at rest five miles behind the lines.

Paul tries to raise the hopes of the dying man. He shakes his head—"You can take my lace-up boots for Muller." Kemmerich dies and his bed is quickly taken by another. Paul carries the boots to Muller.

CHAPTER 5

MEANWHILE the German aeroplane has been shot down. Like a comet it bursts into a streamer of smoke and falls headlong. Kropp has lost the bottle of beer. Disgruntled he counts out the money from his wallet.

"Surely Himmelstoss was a very different fellow as a postman," say I, after Albert's disappointment has subsided. "Then how does it come that he's such a bully as a drill-sergeant?"

The question revives Kropp, more particularly as he hears there's no more beer in the canteen. "It's not only Himmelstoss, there are lots of them. As sure as they get a stripe or a star they become different men, just as though they'd swallowed concrete."

"That's the uniform," I suggest.

"Roughly speaking, it is," says Kat, and prepares for a long speech, 'but the root of the matter lies elsewhere. For instance, if you train a dog to eat potatoes and then afterwards put a piece of meat in front of him, he'll snap at it, it's his nature. And if you give a man a little bit of authority he behaves just the same way, he

Their case was presented to the federal grand jury, and seven victims, who had identified them, testified before that body. From the amount of money found on the two men, it is believed that at least $200 in counterfeit money had been passed by them.

INCENDIARIES FLEE SCENE IN WATERTOWN

Mother of Three Awakes to Find House K...

Soaked and Blazing

A bold attempt by two incendiaries to destroy a two-story tenement house in Hazel st., Watertown, in which two families were sleeping, was frustrated early today when Mrs. Charles Karabian, mother of three children, was awakened by the talking of the firebugs.

She was just waking her husband when the incendiaries struck a match and applied it to the kerosene-soaked outside wall of the house.

Then they fled through the back yard, went over a fence and through another lot to a back street.

Hastily waking their three children, Mr. and Mrs. Karabian fled the house with them. Meanwhile, Masab Arsianian, occupant of the second floor, aroused his family and escaped with them.

With neighbors assisting, the blaze was kept down until firemen arrived. They discovered that a mop had been utilized to "paint" the sides of the house with kerosene, four cans being used.

A basket, filled with kerosene-soaked rags and paper, also was found, beneath a rear piazza.

Arsianian, according to police, had a fight two weeks ago with two men at which time they threatened to "roast you and your family."

State Fire Marshal Neal was notified of the attempt to burn the dwelling.

FATHER-IN-LAW BLAMED FOR LOST LOVE

Teacher Bride of Two Years Says Relative Responsible for Divorce Action

Mrs. Esther S. Goldberg of Trident ave., Winthrop, 25, two-year bride of Dr. Samuel B Goldberg of Winthrop, graduate of Tufts Medical school, has filed in Suffolk Superior Civil Court a suit for $100,000 against her father-in-law, Harry Goldberg, Winthrop real estate operator, charging him with having alienated her husband's affections.

Mrs. Goldberg, a handsome, bobbed-haired brunette school teacher, charges in her declaration that her father-in-law not only alienated his son's affections from her, but also that the father-in-law caused his son to leave the bride and tried to have the son institute divorce proceedings. The bride has attached her father-in-law's real estate.

The bride said yesterday that she had known her husband for several years, having been a boarder in the Goldberg home on Wave Way ave., Winthrop.

They became engaged, she said, in May, 1926, when Samuel Goldberg was still at Tufts Medical. His father, she said, gave them a big engagement party, acknowledged her as his son's fiancee and gave her a diamond wrist watch as gift from him and a diamond ring on behalf of his son.

The son was graduated in June, 1927, and they were married secretly June 21, right after graduation.

Roxbury Woman Gets $100 Lucky Bill

BY WON LUCKY BILL

One week from the date of the first publication of the number in the Boston Evening American

If the proprietor of a certain corner grocery store in Roxbury knew that he gave Mrs. Susan Terry, 210 Whipple rd., $5.61 last Monday in change of a $5 bill on a $2 purchase, it's very probable that he would call an ambulance for an examination of his head.

Yet that's just what he did and even thanked her for patronage. Because, not having paid any attention especially to the Lucky bill numbers printed every day in the Boston Evening American, he did not know that the $1 bill he gave out in change was the Lucky bill No. T 24850D redeemable at the Boston Evening American office for $100 in Uncle Sam's new currency.

But Mrs. Terry doesn't let any bills slip through her fingers. She compares every old dollar bill she gets with the numbers appearing daily in the Boston Evening American and finds I've paid her $99 too much for change.

Fred V. Curtis, 97 Mt. Laurel, Dorchester, is another fellow who doesn't attend to any such mere money, get in, pay without an argument. No sirree, he checks every old dollar bill before he spends it. Monday night he went to the theater at Fields Corner. The ticket seller gave him a ticket and a lucky cash in change of two one-dollar bills. Curtis knew one $1 bill was a Lucky bill and paid him $5 for it. We don't see that the cashier at the Fields Corner theater will be a little peeved when she learns how careless she has been in handling money.

Now folks my books just don't balance. Somewhere out in No man's land there is floating around quite a few of those wrinkled old $1 bills which are worth $340 plus the $125 I'm offering for today's new numbers. That makes it $465. I have down at the Boston American office 5 Winthrop sq., waiting to pay holders of Lucky Dollar bills.

I guarantee that every bill which is listed in another column in today's Boston Evening American as being unredeemed is in circulation. It's up to you to find them.

Gee, but it's tough, but that $100 Lucky Dollar bill with the serial number of X22611698D must was first published in the Boston Evening American last Thursday, goes off the list tonight. I'll pay the unusual dividends on Lucky bills if they are presented to me within

GOW PLANS TO IMPROVE POSTAL SERVICE IN HUB DISTRICT

TAKES A SURVEY OF DRUG STORE SUB-STATIONS

Postmaster Seeks to Better Facilities for Handling Mail Matter

With the interest of improving service, Postmaster Charles H. Gow has begun a thorough personal survey of the 199 contract stations now used in the Boston postoffice to receive and dispatch mail in drug stores and similar places throughout the 25 cities and towns in the 250 square miles of the Boston postal district.

These small stations last year had a total stamp sale of $634,492 in addition to large money order sales. The average business was $3.4 in the small stations.

In one month's total stamp sales for the year ended $41,385. It was in the Board of Trade building, [illegible] the low mark for the new building was $5.11 stamps sold at a Washington street [illegible].

As numerous complaints have been made to the postmaster about the type of service in these small contract stations, Postmaster Gow decided to make an extensive survey of their situation.

The most frequent complaint is that drug store employes apparently dislike to sell stamps while other customers are waiting for more profitable service. There is no immediate profit in selling stamps or making out money orders.

LET BY BIDS

The public, according to the postmaster, has the impression that the clerk at these drug store postoffice stations is an employe of the postoffice and, therefore, should promptly respond to a rush call for a stamp or money order, even though customers are at other counters.

Col. Gow explained the contract system to a Boston Evening American reporter. These small stations are established through competitive bids made by store owners who believe a sub-station will bring customers into the store. The theory is that a customer comes in to buy stamps and remains to buy a soda or other purchase.

Though such stations are in outlying districts far from regular postoffice stations, bids on contracts point to convenience to the public. Postoffice authorities, however, prefer that such contract stations be discontinued because of the many difficulties arising, but the stations are maintained because the public wants them.

When a public demand arises for a new station, the postoffice advertises for bids. Several applicants usually bid and the lowest bidder gets the contract if he is reliable and located in a convenient place.

Very often drug store owners bid a price which represents a loss of a few hundred dollars, but feel the postal business will bring enough trade to balance their loss.

SEES CRITICISM

Col. Gow pointed out that drug store clerks are not employes of the postoffice and therefore cannot be compelled to [illegible] the duties of the postal service. He said with the letter [illegible] he would [illegible] to be subject to criticism [illegible] cancel contracts.

The [illegible] months of the present year [illegible] such stations have been opened. Col. Gow said he would be obliged to cancel one of these [illegible] unless the policy [illegible] complaints fell [illegible].

He said [illegible] reading a [illegible] letter [illegible] which appeared [illegible] as well as the letter [illegible] He said [illegible] time [illegible] stations [illegible] small [illegible] letter.

WOBURN WATER FILTHY AND UNFIT TO DRINK, PROBE REVEALS

RUNS THROUGH PIG PEN, IS CHARGE

Investigator Denounces Apathy of Officials—Avers Supply Not Filtered

That Woburn citizens are drinking water that runs through a pig pen and is not filtered, that the street drains empty into the city water supply and that the state board of health has never placed its stamp of approval on Woburn water, are some of the charges which will be made by Walker Brown, chairman of a committee investigating the desirability of establishing a swimming pool in Woburn, at a meeting of the City Council of that city.

Mr. Brown, George F. Morrissey and Charles F. Mahiney were appointed by the council to select a site for establishing a swimming pool, which the citizens feel is vitally needed. Horn pond is the only sizeable body of water in Woburn which could be converted into such a pool but when the committee investigated conditions at the pond they were astounded, according to Mr. Brown.

Mr. Brown said there is a continual scum on the surface of the pond and that the board of health is incensed at the condition of the drinking water. According to Mr. Brown, Dr. John P. Carroll, a member of the board of health, declared that he wouldn't drink the city water if he was "choking to death."

Mr. Brown also quotes Dr. Carroll as saying that if an epidemic of typhoid ever broke out in Woburn the city would be wiped out. Brown declared that although a water commission was appointed several years ago to study the situation and has been kept practically intact by each succeeding mayor, it has done nothing to alleviate the situation.

"The only thing the water commissioners have done," he said, "is to ask for appropriations to hire engineers and make investigations."

Mr. Brown declared that the people of Woburn have always believed that the water which was taken from the pond was filtered, but he and the members of his committee were astounded to learn that it is not filtered but is pumped directly into the pipes. He said, however, that the water is treated with chlorine.

FISHER ARGUES TREMONT ST. 1-WAY PLAN

Expedited Traffic Flow on Side Streets as Well, He Says

Commenting on the resumption of two-way traffic on Tremont st between Scollay sq. and Broadway and also upon the general subject of traffic congestion in the downtown business area, Chairman William A. Fisher of the traffic commission said it was his belief that the wave of criticism of one-way streets and the total elimination of parking in that area is gradually turning in the opposite direction.

While the emergency one-way traffic rule, effective June 28, was in operation on Tremont st between Scollay sq. and Broadway owing to the resurfacing of Tremont st. Chairman Fisher made a careful survey of existing conditions. In his judgement, he said, the temporary one-way rule was very effective in expediting the flow of vehicular traffic, not only in Tremont st. but in the intersecting streets.

Chairman Fisher admitted that the one-way rule increased the northerly flow of traffic in Washington st, but said that the regular flow was not interrupted, nor was any inconvenience caused in the general movement of traffic.

He said that the entire downtown district was benefited by the temporary change. If the temporary one-way rule did nothing else, he said it at least cleaned up the every-way maze of traffic in Scollay sq. The financial district was greatly benefited he said, because thousands of cars from that section had a clear-cut rotary movement into Scollay sq. and out Tremont st., southerly, or a similar movement in the opposite direction through the square into Cambridge st.

Referring to the fact that Tremont st. forms the only southern artery out of the downtown retail business district, Chairman Fisher said the benefit accruing to traffic during the peak hour, between 4 and 6 in the evening were quite noticeable.

Another observation which Mr. Fisher said he made while the one-way rule was in effect was that there was less backing up of traffic lines, pole streets between Tremont and Washington sts.

The Traffic Commission is making a thorough study of the report of Dr. Miller McClintock of the Erskine Bureau of Harvard and is considering the question of how best to apply some of the recommendations in that report to Boston. Dr. McClintock is of the opinion that further prohibition of parking in congested streets will be necessary to abolish the convenience of a relatively small number of operators from interfering with the rights of all users of the public streets.

He said that another phase of the traffic situation now receiving serious consideration relates to the movement of express vehicles in congested areas.

POLICE BLAME SECRET FEUD IN SHOOTING

Mystery Shots Down Charlestown Man; Dragnet Is Spread for Gunman

Pursuing a theory that Charles H. Gatley, 29, of Elm st., Charlestown, who is at the Haymarket Relief Hospital suffering from two bullet wounds, was a victim of a feud, police today spread a dragnet for his assailant.

Four shots were fired at the injured man, it is believed by police, but only two took effect.

A pretty young woman was released after questioning by police. Gatley and the young woman both insisted that he was the victim of a man unknown to them, who shot at Gatley while he was engaged in fixing a tire on his auto.

Search for the gun on roofs and through cellars in Soley st., where the shooting occurred, was made today. Two 38 caliber bullets found in an entry way are the same type bullet as the ones that struck Gatley, police say.

Special Officer William Goldetzn found one of the bullets, and Patrolman Michael Regan of the City Sq Station the other.

Inspector Dennessky and Augustus Gill, police stenographer, took a bedside statement from Gatley, in which he said he did not know his assailant.

An automobile license was found in the Gatley car bearing the name of a man whom police said they are seeking. They refused to divulge his name.

Nealey Drops Suit Against Bauer

An agreement was filed in the Salem Superior Court recording the withdrawal of the suit of William A. Nealey, president of the Central Labor Union of Lynn, for $25,000, against Mayor Bauer, alleging slander and libel.

The agreement was filed by James W. Sullivan, representing Mayor Bauer, and Atty. Arthur Pulo, representing Mr. Nealey.

Nealey's suit against the Lynn mayor was the outcome of differences which they had over the question of the right to use the streets of Lynn for public speechmaking.

MR. BOSTON
By JACK CONWAY

JACK SHARKEY was punching away at the small bag when Mr. Boston stepped into Jim Toland's Gym. The Boston heavyweight contender's skin was tanned from two weeks spent at Bow Lake, New Hampshire.

Sharkey hammered away at the light bag with much power and precision. He next worked on the heavy bag, after which he did some shadow boxing.

"I am going to train for a week," said Sharkey. "I want to keep tuned up so that it will be easy for me to get into perfect fighting condition when I start getting ready for my meeting with Max Schmeling in September.

"I only weigh 197 pounds right now. This is only four pounds above my fighting notch. When I have not been training, I have been roughing it in the mountains. That keeps one physically fit and also breaks the monotony of the training grind."

Johnny Buckley watched Sharkey go through his paces.

"Jack will be all right for Schmeling," said Buckley. "I expect that the details for the bout will be ironed out by Monday when the option Madison Square Garden has on Sharkey's services expires.

"The Garden people seem to think the match would draw the most in Chicago with Detroit in second place. Sharkey and myself, of course, prefer Boston as this is our home town. I would like the fans here to have the opportunity to see Jack in a big fight.

"HUMBERT FIGAZY apparently is still a real rival of the New York Garden. He asked me to go to New York to talk to him this week, but I decided not to do so in view of the fact Sharkey's option with the Garden does not expire until next Monday. Bill Carey has promised he will name Sharkey's opponent by that time.

"I regret Schmeling got himself tangled up in so many contracts, but that is his difficulty. Sharkey would just as prefer go in there with Dempsey if Carey could make the match."

BIG BOY RAWSON stepped on to the floor and went through a workout. Rawson's bout with Bob Mills has been put off indefinitely as the Harry Kelley entry has an attack of boils. Big Boy merely wishes to keep fit so that he will be ready for any heavyweight who may bob up.

"I would like to correct a recent story somebody sent out to the effect that I was licked by Jake Zeramby," said Eddie. "I only fought Zeramby once and I ended up with the decision. None of the feather-weights are tossing me for a loss."

EDDIE let his eyes turn towards the ring where Frankie Moore was boxing. Moore is getting ready for his 10-round bout with Al Ridgeway of Jersey, which will be staged at the Boston Garden on next Monday night.

"I always like to see Moore box," said Curley, 'as he gives action. He never takes a backward step. One down I have to chose Frankie." This should be pleasant news for Ridgeway, who is also a stand-up fighter.

JIM TOLAND remarked that there are more boxers working in his gym than ever.

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

MEN and women swimmers will compete Saturday night in the fourth of a series of swim meets, which are being held under the auspices of the Boston Swimming Association in the Nautical Swimming Pool, Revere Beach boulevard, Revere.

On the program of events there is to be one New England championship the New England A. A. U. fancy diving championship for women. In this event the best divers from Whitinsville Boston Swimming Association, Women's Swim Association of Brookline, are entered.

The women will also compete in the 220-yard backstroke, scratch, and 300 meters medley scratch race. The latter event will be a race of 100 meters breaststroke, 100 meters backstroke and 100 meters freestyle, in the order named.

Open events for men will find competition in the 100 meters free style handicap invitation diving and 440 yards free style, open to members of the New England A. A. U. only.

The special 880 yards freestyle swim will find the best of the swimmers of Worcester, Boston Swimming Association and other organizations competing. The race will give the first three each 10 finish a fine trip to Lucerne-in-Maine Country Club to compete in the latter's meet which will be held August 3 and 4 in Maine.

ONE of the favorites in this event is John Chepiwich of Worcester Boys' Club, leading free-style swimmer of the present time in this section. Chepiwich is ready to compete in any of the events he swims offered by any of the clubs or swim organizations about New England. Like his sister Albina, who is at present on her way to Honolulu with Joan McSheehy and other of the leading swimmers of the country, John keeps right on improving in his style and stroke. Each race he enters finds him coming home with another trophy or championship, while the records set up by Chepiwich are in keeping up with his sister's wonderful past as a swimmer.

Entries should be send to H. Bradlee Fenno, Boston Swimming Association, 60 State st.

Lincoln Axworthy St. Stephen Winner

St. Stephen, N. B., July 8—Lincoln Axworthy, the showy trotter owned by Mrs. W. H. Bird of Revere, Mass, was the only favorite which won at the opening of the Maine and New Brunswick Circuit meeting here today. He took two of the three heats in the 2.30 trot.

Fred Wright Up Against Hard Game

BUFFALO FANS STAGE RIOT

Buffalo, July 18—Several hundred rooting baseball fans broke up the first game of a doubleheader between Buffalo and Newark, International League teams, and menaced the visiting club for several minutes before they were quieted by detectives with drawn revolvers.

The spectators swarmed on the field when Rahiman, Newark catcher, who had aroused their anger twice by blocking Buffalo base runners, collided with Herb Thomas, Buffalo second baseman, and knocked him unconscious as he was completing a double play.

Picking up bats, bats and any other weapons they could find, the fans swept toward the Newark players, who were unable, despite the help of several policemen, to fight their way clear.

Al Mamaux, veteran pitcher, was knocked down and several other players who had gathered about the unconscious Thomas were endangered by the mob.

Burns' operatives drew revolvers and finally cowed the rioters as the injured second baseman was carried to his dressing room.

Promise Made 25 Yrs. Ago Kept by May Sutton Bundy

LONDON, July 18 (INS)—Tommy Wiggins, a former ball-boy at the old Wimbledon tennis courts, is today the possessor of an autograph tennis racquet given to him by Mrs. May Sutton Bundy, of California, to redeem a promise made 25 years ago.

Twenty-five years ago there was a ball boy at the old Wimbledon courts named Wiggins. He proudly retrieved and fetched balls for Mrs. Bundy who, at that time, was Miss Sutton.

Miss Sutton won the championship that year. She was so pleased with the alertness of Wiggins that she promised him the next time she came to Wimbledon she would give him a racquet inscribed with her signature.

But Mrs. Bundy did not return to Wimbledon for 25 years, or until the tournament just recently held there. She forgot Wiggins and Wiggins forgot her.

DURING the tournament this year Mrs. Bundy, now the mother of five children, stopped to purchase a newspaper outside the new Wimbledon arena. She looked hard at the newsboy.

"I really believe it is Wiggins," she remarked. "Are you the Wiggins who used to be ball boy?"

"Yes—I mean I am," the man responded.

"Then I owe you a tennis racquet," said Mrs. Bundy.

She went back to the courts, got a racquet, wrote her name on it and presented it to the surprised and much delighted friend of a quarter of a century ago.

Commodore Charles A. Welch's Yankee, Miss Elizabeth Hovey's Oriole and E. Arthur Shumer, Jr.'s Tipler III.

TILDEN, HUNTER IN CUP PLAY

Berlin, July 18—Big Bill Tilden and Frank Hunter will play the opening singles matches for the United States against Germany tomorrow. Tilden is paired with Hans Moldenhauer and Hunter with Daniel Prenn.

In the doubles of the Davis Cup interzone finals, the youthful American combination of Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn will play Moldenhauer and Prenn.

Thus the Germans will depend on their two favorites for the entire competition against the United States. The doubles match is scheduled Saturday. In the concluding two singles matches on Sunday the first day's pairings will be reversed, with Tilden playing Prenn and Hunter opposing Moldenhauer.

STATE AMATEUR CHAMPION SCHEDULED TO BATTLE STRONG OPPONENTS

By BILL GRIMES

DUE to a top heavy draw, Fred J. Wright, Jr., of Albemarle, faces the most difficult assignment of his career defending his Mevachusetts amateur title, the first round of which is being played this morning at the Belmont Spring Country Club.

Wright was seeded in the first quarter, which is over-burdened with talent. Besides Wright, there are at least two real contenders in the upper quarter, Joe Batcheider of Salem and Al Wade of Meadow Brook.

Of the four matches in this quarter, Fred Wright has the easiest to open the match play elimination. Wright is playing Walter Falvey, of Waltham, while Joe Batcheider must step through his fellow-townsman, Ralph Munro, now representing United Shoe, while Al Wade will find Herbert Jaques of The Country Club offering stern opposition. And, the winner of the McDow-Chisholm match will meet Wright this afternoon.

Regardless of the results of the first and second rounds, at least one of the best players in the field will be eliminated before he has an opportunity to match holes with Wright. In the event of Batcheider and Wade winning their first round matches, they come together this afternoon which will soften the going for the champion.

THERE is more than the average amount of strength in the second quarter, where such stars as Billy Whitcomb, John Merwin, Elmer Ward, Billy Munsell and Ray Gorton will clash.

Although there are some fine golfers in the upper quarter of the lower half, namely Bill Blaney, the New England amateur champion; Frank Harsey of Wellesley, and Billy McPhail of Norfolk, the opposition in this section cannot be classed with that of the first and second quarters.

Marshall Forrest, Vesper; Bill Arnold, Thorny Lea, and Emory Stratton, Brae Burn, stand out in the fourth quarter. Forrest, who was the unsuccessful finalist in the recent intercollegiates, is playing Chet Rich in the first round, while Bill Arnold has to step through that Country Club veteran, Rodney Brown, to get to the afternoon round.

Emory P. Stratton, who was the medalist of the qualifying round, meets a great player in A. T. Bufflinton of Fall River, who went through Eliot Tabey of New Bedford and Lewis Grimball to the third round at Essex last year, but lost a close match to Joe Norton, Jr. Stratton put Harold Kaler out of the running in the first round, but then fell before Johnny Merwin, thereby offering one of the biggest surprises of the championship.

AS WAS predicted there are many new faces in action at Belmont Spring this morning. Only 16 of the Essex qualifiers are on duty today at Belmont, and all but six of them tried to make the match play grade. Few were brave enough to predict that such players as W. G. McDow, Oakley; M. P. Graham and Walter Falvey, Waltham, and Newton Hyslop, Albemarle, would qualify, but, on the other hand, Eddie Lowery, the former titleholder; Joe Lynch, Mel Kaler, Lewis Grimball, Joe Monahan, Searles Reed and Mel Merritt were expected to be among the low 32.

Longwood Bowl Tennis Reaches Quarter Final Round

TWO UPSETS IN WOMEN'S CONTESTS

SINGLES

By JOHN GILLOOLY

FRITZ MERCUR, Sadakazu Onda, J. Gilbert Hall, Hobart Hyde, John Doeg, Gregory Mangin and Frank Shields, all seeded players, and W. B. Evans, have survived to the quarterfinals in the Longwood Bowl tournament and battle today to reach the semifinal at Chestnut Hill.

Weller Evans of New York caused the only upset in the seeded player ranks by eliminating E Mauran Beals, former Harvard hockey captain in three straight sets. Beals has tried to get in stride for two days but he was playing way below form and, to his friends, his defeat wasn't an overwhelming surprise.

For the semi-final matches it looks as though Mercur, Hall, Doeg and either Gregory Mangin or Frank Shields will be the contestants.

Mercur meets Onda today. Hall battles Hobart Hyde, while Doeg tackles Weller Evans and Mangin and Shields clash in the other match.

The fight between Mangin, the Georgetown boy who was runner-up in the Intercollegiate singles and Frank X. Shields, national junior champion from New York should be the best on the program.

ALTHOUGH all the seeded players ran true to expectation, with the exception of Beals in the Bowl singles, such was not the case in the women's invitation tourney. The third day of play saw the upsets hoodoo dropping the two outstanding players by the wayside. Miss Sarah Palfrey of Boston was defea. 1 by Miss Mary Greef while Miss Marjorie Gladman of the University of Southern California was conquered by Miss Margaret Blake of Lenox.

These two defeats were hardly imaginable by Longwood fans who saw Miss Gladman win the ultimate Intercollegiate doubles and singles for the Pacific Coast three weeks ago and have been watching Miss Palfrey beating the best opposition in the land for some four years.

Miss Ethel Burkhardt and Miss Dorothy Andrus have now been nominated as the favorites in the tourney with Miss Mary Greef and Margaret Blake also to be very much considered. Two court players, too, Miss Josephine Cruickshank of the University of California and Mrs. L. A. Harper of San Francisco, will not be eliminated easily.

MANCHESTER NINE STRONG

By CHARLES HOFFMAN

Although it is a little early in the race to predict anything, it looks very much as if Manchester would be the team to cop the second half. Win Clark has the pitchers, also two good catchers, and the smoothest working infield in the league, and a great hitting outfield

Jerry Lyons, former New York State League player, came within an ace of tying Pat Doherty's record of six hits out of six times at bat, made last week, when the Lewiston first sacker banged out five, including two doubles

Corella of Hartford, Cicero and O'Connor of Pittsfield, members of the New England League last year, are playing great ball.

Rauding, who has been sold to the St. Louis Browns and is the cleanup hitter for the Lewiston club, got four hits in six times at bat, including a home run over the right field fence at Portland.

The Lynn fans will have another treat when the Lewiston club comes to the stadium next Sunday in a doubleheader. This will make up for the game which was postponed last Sunday by rain.

Joe Casey, the old Detroit catcher, who is now calling them in the N. E. League, chased his first player from the game.

Synott, the Haverhill catcher, is the hardest worker in the league and is being watched by big league scouts. He bats and throws right-handed and is the most timely hitter on the club.

Chick Fraser, Revere youngster, is having a great year on the mound, for Willie McConough's club and is sure to go higher

Al Douglas is camera shy. When the photographers went to take his picture at the double-header the other day Al picked up his heels and ran for the clubhouse.

The fans are thinking of giving Tom Whelan a day sometime in August. Whelan gave the club a championship team last year and also won the first half this season and whenever he appears in Portland, Manchester, and Nashua his picture is plastered on the front page of the newspapers, and the caption reads: "Whelan Is In Town."

All 8 Twi Teams Go Into Action

By DICK McSWEENEY

FOR the first time in many weeks the eight clubs which make up the Twilight League get into action on the same night. There are four games carded and each promises to be well worth watching.

Roslindale, considered by many fans as a possible winner in the second half of the race, goes to the Commonwealth Avenue grounds for a game with South Boston. John Dixon is slated to hurl for the invaders. South Boston sends Smith to the mound. Roslindale appears to be in the best of condition but it will meet a rugged foe in Southie. There should be plenty of free hitting in this contest since both teams possess sluggers

Taunton will have it troubles at Reading where the natives have become enthusiastic over the home team. Manager Al Weygrand has made some shifts in his Taunton lineup which he believes will help win games. Greenburg is at the first sack, having replaced Brown, while Weygrand himself has given up second base to Harris

Taunton is liable to start Lou Strecker, former Roslindale southpaw hurler. Lou is out to show that there's life in the old arm yet. The locals intend to put Turner in the box

READING has got off to a good start in the second half and Manager Doucette will not be content if his men fail to keep in the thick of the fight

Taunton is looking for better things in the baseball line and will get them if Weygrand has his say.

Quincy invades Malden in a return game with the latter nine. The Granite City clan looks unbeatable right now with its great array of heavy-hitters and its dependable brand of hurling

Les Andrews will toil on the Quincy mound tonight while Malden is expected to start Howie Queen, Twilight League veteran

Malden is throwing fears of life under the management of Frank Coughlin and George Atkinson and may do better in the second half than it did in the first.

Dorchester plays Salem at Donovan Field. The struggle should go to Salem. Dorchester hit a fast pace in the first half of the Twilight race but J. Marshall's injury and the failure of certain regulars to rock the ball put the team out of the running.

RED SOX OPEN SERIES WITH CHICAGO

Chicago, July 18—With two of the stars on the injured list, Manager Bill Carrigan is not able to present his full strength for the seventh place series that opens with the White Sox today. Outfielder Kenny Williams has been added to the hospital staff that already includes Ed Morris, the pitching ace

He risked serious injury in chasing a fly ball Eddie Rosts in the fifth inning, bouncing off the concrete but making a sensational catch.

Williams had been hitting long distance drives and otherwise aiding the Red Sox since returning as a regular. His place will be filled by Jack Rothrock

Jack Russell, who is filling Ed Morris' shoes as the starting pitcher for the Sox, opposes the White Hose brigade this afternoon. If he is as good as he was last Sunday when he tamed the Browns with three hits, Carrigan should top off one game from the present handicap of four laps

Carrigan has been encouraged by the Western spurt of his tailenders and is driving them with confidence in trying to get out of the cellar

For a change he is receiving fair pitching. Ruffing dropped another game yesterday when he was not accorded any batting support. Sammy Gray carving a 4 to 0 defeat into Carrigan's sack. The Browns right-hander showed no ill effects of pitching two games in four days against the Macks last week, allowing only five hits

THE Tribe put on a real surprise party and a most unpleasant run for the Pirates. The pace-setters came to town each sure that they would profit by their visit.

Instead they lost two out of four and a full game to the scrappy Mace Brown. They were very fortunate, too, that they didn't drop another as with any kind of luck

Cards Open 4-Game Series With Braves

By JOE CASHMAN

THE St. Louis Cardinals, champions of the National League last season but now on the verge of dropping into the second division, open a four-game series with the Braves this p. m.

The engagement with Billy Southworth's Mound City crew would end the second home stand of the Tribe against the western clubs. The natives have done well, everything considered, against the boys from the wide open spaces. They split even with both the Cubs and Pirates, the two best teams in the league, according to the present standing, and took one out of four from the Reds.

Despite their commendable efforts, however, they are a lot nearer the cellar than when the invasion began and if they don't want to be in the basement when they start West next Sunday evening they must gain the edge over the Cards.

AFTER breaking even with the Pirates, the Tribal warriors are looking forward with confidence to the visit of the Red Birds. They figure that if they are good enough to split with the league leaders they ought to win at least three out of four from any other club without much trouble.

The Cards are also confident of grabbing off the long end of the coming series and not without good cause as they have been from three victories in five starts against the Giants.

With both clubs traveling on high and determined to gain at the expense of the other those should be as much fun up at the Wigwam for this and the next three afternoons as there was during the past three, which is saying you don't know it, was plenty.

THE CARDS are the biggest disappointment of the season. Rated as a pennant contender at the start, they got off with a rush, and for the first two months they were either on or very close to the top.

Then, for no apparent reason at all, they started to lose. They dropped a couple of series to the Cubs and Pirates which sent them down to third place. Then, they tossed away eleven games in a row, and fell completely out of the flag run!

HY DIAMOND TACKLES JANCO

TOMMY DALEY, Lynn welterweight, will return to the wars tonight at the Revere Cycle Track, meeting Bob Jasse of Revere in the feature 10-round bout of the Cycle A. C.

The match, an inter-city affair between Lynn and Revere, is expected to attract the largest crowd of the year to the big Cycle Track, for there is intense rivalry between the North Shore fighters.

It was announced that the winner is to box Buddy Clark, popular Salem welterweight, for the welterweight championship of the North Shore at the Cycle Track in two weeks, and with this added incentive, Daley and Jasse should provide a warm battle.

The bout is to be staged at popular prices, with 10,000 seats at 50 cents, 5000 at one dollar, 2000 at $1.50, and a few choice seats at $2. The advance sale is the best that the club has yet enjoyed, and tickets will be on sale both at the Cycle Track and the Cycle A. C. office, 81 Canal st., today.

HENRY BUD JANCO of Lawrence, popular on the North Shore because of his many great battles at Ft. Banks last summer, will make his first start at the Cycle Track in the 10-round semi-final bout, meeting Hy Diamond, jewel of the West End. Janco is a club fighter who gives action and since Diamond has a flashing speed of his own, the bout should be a fitting prelude to the main bout.

Five four-rounders will complete the card. Tom Harper of Medford will be paired with Horatio Vella of Gloucester, Jack Silva of Cambridge with Dan Reagan of Gardner, Mc. Frankie Baldi of Lynn with Carl Russo of Revere, Sonny Boy of Gloucester with Willie Muse of Beverly, and Tony Aquario with Tony Morel.

BUD TAYLOR, Terre Haute Terror, referred to in the parlance of the boxing game as the Blond Tiger, who dazzled a big crowd at Kelly and Hayes Gym in his first local training session for his first appearance in a Hub ring against Andy Martin, New England featherweight king, at the uncrooled Boston Garden next Monday night, expects to carry on his campaign for the featherweight crown right here in this city.

Taylor, according to Eddie Long, his manager, who accompanied him to this city, is prepared to meet Jake Zeramby, Kid Chocolate and Andre Routis to assert his right to the featherweight throne and nothing would please him better than participating in the fight for the title in the Hub.

This dangerous punching featherweight formerly held the bantamweight title of the world and he will not be satisfied until he wins the featherweight crown.

Without doubt the fiercest hitting featherweight in the history of the game, Taylor expects to make short work of Andy Martin with his deadly right hand in the Garden Monday night, although he may meet with a huge surprise as so many other featherweights have who have met Martin during the past few months.

A BRILLIANT supporting card of preliminaries has been arranged with a 10-round semifinal between Frankie Moore of the North End and Al Ridgeway of Jersey City as one of the features. Moore, who recently defeated Hy Diamond, is out to turn the tables on Ridgeway, who beat him in a stirring contest when they last met at the Garden.

Loughran Risks His Crown Tonight

New York, July 18—James J. Braddock of Jersey City, to whom not so long ago a crossing of the Hudson river was as much of an event as a crossing of the Atlantic to a seasoned globe trotter, will ferry over in style tonight to fight a fellow Irishman, Tommy Loughran, for the light heavyweight championship of the world.

The fight is for 15 rounds to a decision. The distance should favor Braddock, who is a natural light heavyweight and not handicapped, as is Loughran, by the effort of training down to the 175-pound limit. Although he probably will enter the ring a slight favorite at odds of 6 to 5, the champion will need all his boxing skill and speed to offset the attack of the rugged, hard-hitting youngster.

Both fighters weigh in this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The fight is scheduled for 10 p. m. eastern daylight time.

Bohlen Wins Third Race

Mike and Packey Put on "Hippodrome"

By TAD

A FIGHT that will linger long in the minds of those who saw it is the "Motordrome Hippodrome" fracas staged by Mike Gibbons, the St. Paul Wizard, and Packey McFarland, of Chicago. The fight was held at the Brighton Beach Motordrome on Saturday night, September 11, 1915.

Oh, what a mob saw that battle!

It looked as though they filled the Polo Grounds twice and dumped it into the Motordrome. Gibbons was the first to enter the ring.

Joe Humphries entered the ring and pulled a gun. Bang! bang. There was a hush. He called Mike to the center and introduced him. Wow! About 25 guys cheered. He then introduced Packey as "Packey McFarland, the popular fighting Irishman of Chicago." Twenty-six guys cheered. Packey was a decided favorite. Billy Joh, the referee, jumped in and they started the fight.

McFarland looked quite cool while Mike was wiping his nose. Mike jabbed Packey on the nose with a left and missed a right, missing it by a mile. They stalled around jabbing, and then started working to the bodies. Mike was belting Packey on the arms instead of the body. Packey was slipping to beat the band. His hands wouldn't stay closed, it seemed.

A fat guy that sat alongside of "Reno Jack" McCaffery said: "This looks like the works to me." Reno Jack said: "Well, I've seen worse."

GIBBONS hit viciously, but they didn't seem to get any place. McFarland swung wildly and slapped Mike on the face.

Wow! What a cheer went up!

The bell rang.

Oh, it was the same old stuff. Mike was the better hitter and a better boxer and a better fighter, but he wasn't doing much. He let Packey hold his arms in clinches. Three or four people hissed. It was nice boxing. McFarland looked as though he wanted to kill Mike, and then slapped him right on the face. Mike's punches were like coast-defense guns compared to the slaps of McFarland, which reminded me of a cap-pistol in point of danger. The bell rang. Mike couldn't find his chair. There was a wild yell for his chair. Dick Curley was using it and forgot to return same.

The third round was on. That guy in back is disgusted. Oh, he was sore. Swore it was a frame. Packey slapped Mike again and a lot of guys cheered. Reno Jack leaned over to the stout gent and said "Out there further they seem to like it."

The fat guy stared at Jack.

"Of course, they do, poor simps. They don't know any better. They're like the farmer who saw his first electric fan and, after looking at it awhile, asked the owner if he wanted to sell the squirrel and said that was SOME SQUIRREL. Of course, they like it. They're a lot of dodos."

MIKE missed an uppercut by four feet and the crowd cheered again. He belted Packey on the right eye. Packey tore in with another wild slap and Mike sent his head back with another left. Mike could have done it oftener, but he liked Packey. The bell.

McFarland was either stunned or dopey, for he started for the wrong corner. Mike shouldn't have hit so hard.

"Why don't you make them fight? They're getting more money than any one ever got for that distance. Pull them away and let's see a fight."

McFarland and Gibbons clinched. McFarland was whispering something to Mike. They broke again. Packey was slapping Mike just as hard as he could with both hands on the ribs and arms. Mike shot some uppercuts and jabbed a left to the right eye. They clinched and Mike talked to Packey.

"That gets my goat!" bawled the fat guy. "What the—why don't the referee get an earful of that and tell us what it is? It's more exciting than the fight."

IN the fifth Mike shot over a straight left to the mouth and Packey almost fell down. He grabbed Mike and they stayed in a clinch for fully half a minute, making faces and hitting elbows and things. Bell. McFarland, a bit dazed and afraid, walked almost to Mike's corner before they yelled to him.

"Say, I heard a funny one yesterday," said the fat guy to Reno Jack. "Oh, they're fighting again, but wait till you hear this. A widower goes into a shoe store to get a pair of shoes. The clerk says ... Ever hear it? There's the bell again. Gee, this is the last round."

Yes, they shook hands, both were just as serious as could be. Mike had an awful time to keep missing with the right. The two gladiators were waving their hands for fair and making the boobs cheerful.

The fat guy resumed, "I will always try anything once, but no more of this Packey and Mike stuff for me." The bell rang.

They stopped. Mike stood there looking mad. Packey walked away and then suddenly remembered something. He rushed back and stuck his fist in Mike's face. Corse Payton couldn't have acted it better. It was so funny that the fat guy laughed out loud.

Reno Jack said: "Well, I know that Mike could lick him if he didn't have to— Say, what do you call it, Kid?" he continued, looking at the fat guy.

"I call it the Motordrome Hippodrome" piped Tub.

Mrs. Walker Wins at Vineyard Haven

Vineyard Haven, July 18—Sixteen boats started today in the regular classes at the mid-week races of Vineyard Haven Yacht Club and three in Class X competing for championship place.

The most interest was centered in the Class X race when the Gull, arriving last, won on her time allowance. Mrs M. L. Walker, who sailed the Gull, did a wonderful job of beating to windward without keel or centerboard, her boat having dropped her board before the race.

Corinthian Racing

The regular mid-week racing of the Corinthian Yacht Club was resumed after a two week's layoff. The race, which brought 21 starters to the line, was sailed in a southerly breeze of moderate strength.

Five Winners in New Bedford Races

New Bedford, July 18—Five classes took part in the unique races of the New Bedford Yacht Club, the 8 boats not competing. A good strong southwest wind made the contests interesting.

The winners were Whiskaway, Yapok, Malolo, Manasca and Polywog.

O. G. accepts Challenge at stronghold of its rivals

The question is often asked: "Does OLD GOLD pick out its strongholds . . . the places where it outsells its three rivals . . . when it makes its 'Concealed Name Tests?'" The answer is "No!" OLD GOLD doesn't seek "set-ups" but "show-downs."

As a youngster, just a bit over two years old, "O. G." couldn't be expected to match "sales totals" with the three veteran brands, each from 12 to 16 years old. Give a young fellow time!

But when it comes to comparing quality... that's "O.G's." meat. It is doing that every day. And romping home with the bacon, in the very places where the three older brands have their greatest following.

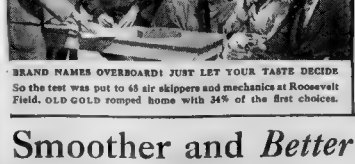
But when 68 Roosevelt aviators and their mechanics took the "Concealed Name Test," OLD GOLD won, hands down, as the most appealing cigarette! (See Certified Public Accountants' report below.)

This shows the real significance of the "Concealed Name Test." It shows that many men are buying cigarettes by sheer habit rather than by taste-preference. It shows that when brand names are forgotten and quality alone prevails, old favorites cannot compete with "O. G's." mellow and honey-like smoothness.

You are entitled to the best for your cigarette money. Why not make sure you are getting it? The "Concealed Name Test" is easily made . . . and it lets your taste decide . . . fair and square!



BRAND NAMES OVERBOARD! JUST LET YOUR TASTE DECIDE

So the test was put to 68 air skippers and mechanics at Roosevelt Field. OLD GOLD romped home with 34% of the first choices.

Certified Public Accountants' Report

"Concealed Name Test" at Roosevelt Field

We hereby certify that on April 11, 1929, we conducted a "Concealed Name Test" of the four leading cigarette brands, among 68 aviators and mechanics at Roosevelt Field. The following is a complete and accurate summary of the results of this test.

BRAND	FIRST CHOICES	RESULT
OLD GOLD	23	34%
"Brand X"	13	19%
"Brand Y"	17	25%
"Brand Z"	15	22%
TOTALS	68	100%

JACK AND MAX MAY FIGHT IN CHICAGO

there and will remain so until he obtains a contract made with Promoter Fugazy. Unable to hold such a contest in New York, Madison Sq. Garden Corporation, it is said on good authority, plans to invade the city and stage the contest here.

Fussier to this effect was been current for weeks, but not until application was made to the South Park board for the Stadium was any strength given the reports.

CAMDEN TOOK CHICAGO

There were two T. Rickard cheered out of New York, with Tommy Dorsey, for a few days. Dorsey, a fair welterweight, was to have met one of Chicago folks, held last championship encounter on the bike path.

Rickard drew better than a capacity house. It was one of the Morgan boys, the Champion Public Service Commissioner, who got Dorsey to New York, while Tex's proposition looked good. Shortly it seemed to work for all Mayor Jimmy Corporation Counsel Schmeling in the Million Dollar Pier, but the contract is not accepted by the New York Boxing Commissioners. At this time no more street vs. trade's in the newspaper got field could be secured. If in the plan of the garden to make the winner with Jack Dempsey, champ in New York or in Florida in February. The garden has a sort of an elimination process on and with Schmeling barred in New York, the promoters look elsewhere for a spot to put on the show.

COMMISH PAS AGREEMENT.

There is a working agreement between Chicago and New York commissioners. Naturally, Schmeling, suspended in the East, should be suspended here. He took no part at the Chicago Stadium on July 4, but the commission declared that permit to perform was because the contract with the local people was signed before Max's suspension was effective in the E.

WE POINT WITH PRIDE TO THIS MENTAL GIANT

PEOPLE used to sneer at Wilbert Wimple when he walked down the street with his garter trailing. Now they sneer out of the other side of their mouths. For Wilbert can buy and sell most of them. While employed as a bus boy in a high toned cafeteria, Wilbert noticed customers stealing each others' hats. He said nothing but perfected the Wimple Safety System. An ordinary fish hook, attached to a line, is hooked onto the inside of each customer. The line is then tied to the bat. In that way when anyone wants to steal a hat, all he has to do is cast the line, which is charged with high voltage electricity and connects with the police alarm clock.

ZUCCHETTI BIKE RACE FAVORITE OF ITALIANS

Vincent Madonna, long the favorite bike rider of the Italians, is rapidly being displaced by Francesco Zucchetti, who is flashing around all the tracks in the Eastern states and setting up an enviable record. Some of his feats this year include a victory in the 50-mile Golden Wheel race last week and numerous victories on the New York and Newark tracks.

This week in the hour race at Revere he will have hundreds of Italians in the stands backing him.

But Zucchetti will need all the backing he can get, for he will have four of the fastest in the game opposing him. First of all there will be Al Letourneur, the Frenchman who recently broke the record for one hour at the Revere track. The mark had stood for nine years until Letourneur came along and set new figures.

Then there will be George Chapman, the veteran who has won the American motor-paced title and Frankie Keenan, the Revere boy, and Victor Rausth, the brilliant young German.

Chapman, at the start of the year, rode like a flash at Revere, but recently he has been in a slump. He says he will come out of it and get going Saturday night.

Junior pacemakers will be seen in a 10-mile race in the semi-final. Four of them, Bruno Laura, East Boston boy; Joe Mariano, Concord, Anthony Bernard, Revere, and Al Keith, also of Revere, are entered, and the act on making a hit with the fans, for all hope to go up with faster company next year. Prizes will be for the usual amateur and pro races.

SENATOR CHIEF NEAR DEATH

Chicago, July 18 (AP)—Clark Griffith, president of the Washington club of the American League, today was in a serious condition following an emergency operation for appendicitis.

Griffith, one of the most prominent figures in major league baseball, became acutely ill Tuesday night, and early afternoon had a dangerously infected appendix removed.

While his general condition following the operation was considered good, Charles Fawcett, the surgeon said the previous condition of the appendix would necessitate drainage and make Griffith's recovery slow.

Griffith, who is 59 years old, had been in poor health for several months.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

MILK is good for everybody, but especially for children. Two to three glasses per day are none too much for the average child, but giving more than a quart a day to make the child grow strong is undesirable. There is a limit to all good things, and their abuse may have a bad result.

BE VACCINATED AGAINST TYPHOID -:- By Dr. Bisch

Take No Chances, Warns Eminent Authority

IF the average person were fully aware of what a serious and dangerous disease typhoid fever is he probably would not hesitate for a moment to have himself immunized against it by means of vaccination.

For [illegible] typhoid fever at any age although it is a disease that [illegible] found in [illegible] any [illegible] typhoid injection and one shuddering to think what might have happened had [illegible] been done.

And besides, especially when visiting the country, on vacation or camping, be sure about the water you drink. In fact it is best to be on the safe side and boil all water.

Be careful also about bathing in polluted or suspicious waters.

Use only pasteurized milk. If this is not available boil the milk.

Exercise care in washing vegetables and berries which are to be eaten raw. Be sure you can feel safe about your oysters and shellfish you eat.

But in addition, I want to repeat, be vaccinated.

A little later, toward the end of the first week after the onset of the disease, peculiar rose-colored spots appear on the abdomen. This is characteristic of typhoid.

Other more serious symptoms may develop later on. There may be ulcerations of the intestines, even perforation. That is, the ulcer pushes a hole through the walls of the bowels and this may prove fatal. Even long trouble may come on. Nerve symptoms and convulsions often appear.

As stated in the beginning, typhoid should be avoided as much as possible for it is a disease that not only is difficult to treat and may be prolonged to weeks and months but it may actually kill.

Therefore, have yourself vaccinated.

During the late war every soldier and sailor had his typhoid injection and one shuddering to think what might have happened had this not been done.

The Gift of Charm

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack

WHAT would you ask for if you had your choice of all the gifts that could be given you? Would it be riches? Or beauty? Or happiness? Or perhaps all three? Then, if you were granted all these, you'd probably remember that you had forgotten to ask for Fame—and your happiness in the three gifts bestowed on you would turn to ashes. And then what would they be worth? Less than nothing!

But suppose you had taken Charm as your gift! Then you would have been the possessor of a gift that makes for constant happiness, for Charm embodies all the gifts of the gods! The girl with charm may be penniless, and almost homely, yet people will flock to her as flies to the honey-pot! For charm not alone brings happiness to its possessor, it also gives happiness to all with whom it comes in contact. Therefore, let your prayer be for charm—that indefinable something that the Frenchman calls "charmant" the Spaniard "simpatica" and which embodies all the loveliness of soul and heart that makes for popularity.

Wouldn't you rather be charming than beautiful? Of course you would. I'm not saying that there is no beauty without charm, for there is lots of it. But sometimes the beauty thinks this sufficient without the exercise of charm. And then Beauty pales.

How to seek Charm? For Love will surely find you then and you'll acquire all the gifts that can be bestowed on mortals.

AUCTION BRIDGE

By WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

DIFFERENCE IN OPENING BIDS AT AUCTION AND CONTRACT

Auction Bidding: South bids one No Trump in preference to bidding a suit. In view of his excessive holding of high cards, a Diamond bid might be left in; and to bid his four-card Heart suit would risk finding his partner without Heart support and with a hand too weak for a takeout.

Contract Bidding: South with an eight probable trick hand and distributed values in three suits, makes the forcing bid of two Diamonds. West passes and North bids two Spades. East passing, South bids three No Trumps.

The Play: West opens the 7 of Spades, indicating that he does not hold three Spade honors, since otherwise he would have opened one of them. East therefore must hold an honor. Declarer reasons, therefore, that he must come up with Dummy's Ace at once to prevent East from winning and possibly shifting to the Club suit before Declarer's Diamonds are established.

Declarer now counts four sure tricks in Diamonds, three in Hearts and one in Clubs; and three, with the Ace of Spades, will give him game.

Declarer does not fear the Spade situation, for if West held five Spades originally, East could have held but two and East's honor would block West. If West held but four Spades, Declarer would be assured of game, as he could lose but three Spade tricks and the King of Diamonds.

North leads a Diamond to the second trick and finesses, West's King winning. West leads another low Spade which East wins with the Jack. East leads a Club, hoping to put West in, but South jumps up with the Ace and proceeds to take in his sure tricks and make game.

This Day in Our History

ON July 18, 1861, the United States refused to recognize the Maximilian government in Mexico. Maximilian, an Austrian prince, was placed there by Napoleon III of France. This was contrary to the Monroe Doctrine. Maximilian's life was romantic and many stories have been based on it.

In himself man is essentially a beast, only he butters it over like a slice of bread with a little decorum.

The army is based on that; one man must always have power over the other. The mischief is merely that each one has much too much power. A non-com can torment a private, a lieutenant a non-com, a captain a lieutenant, until he goes mad. And because they know they can, they all soon acquire the habit more or less.

News of Himmelstoss

Take a simple case: we are marching back from the parade-ground dog-tired. Then comes the order to sing. We are glad enough to be able to trail arms, but we sing spiritlessly. At once the company is turned about and has to do another hour's drill as punishment. On the march back the order to sing is given again, and once more we start. Now, what's the use of all that? It's simply that the company commander's head has been turned by having so much power. And nobody blames him. On the contrary, he is praised for being strict. That, of course, is only a trifling instance, but it holds also in very different affairs.

"You I ask you: Let a man be whatever you like in peacetime, what occupation is there in which he can behave like that without getting a crack on the nose?

"He can only do that in the army. It goes to the heads of them all, you see. And the more insignificant a man has been in civil life the worse it takes him."

"They say, of course, there must be discipline," ventures Kropp, meditatively.

"True," growls Kat, "they always do. And it may be so, still it oughtn't to become an abuse. But you try to explain to a blacksmith or a laborer or a workman, you try to make that clear to a simple soldier—and that's what most of them are here. All he understands is that he has been properly trained so that when he comes up to the front he thinks he knows exactly what he should do in every circumstance and what not. It's simply amazing, I tell you, that the ordinary soldier survives so long up here in the front-line. Simply amazing!"

No one protests. Everyone knows that drill ceases only in the front-line and begins a few miles behind, with all the absurdities of saluting and parade. It is an iron law that the soldier must be employed under every circumstance.

Here Tjaden comes up with a flushed face. He is so excited that he stutters. Beaming with satisfaction he stammers out: "Himmelstoss is on his way. He's coming to the front!"

Revenge Is Planned

Tjaden has a special grudge against Himmelstoss, because of the way he abused him in the barracks. Tjaden wets his bed, he does it at night in his sleep. Himmelstoss maintained that it was sheer laziness and invented a method worthy of himself for curing Tjaden.

He hunted up another wet-a-bed, named Kindervater, from a neighboring hut, and quartered him with Tjaden. In the huts there were the usual bunks, one above the other in pairs, with mattresses of wire-netting. Himmelstoss put these two so that one occupied the upper and the other the lower bunk The man underneath was of course disgusted. The next night they changed over and the lower one put on top so that he could retaliate. That was Himmelstoss' system of self-education.

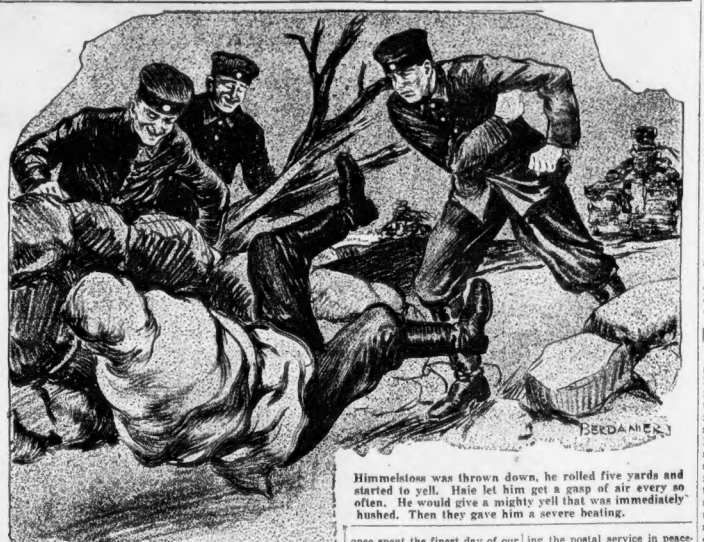
The idea was low but not ill-conceived. Unfortunately it accomplished nothing because the first assumption was wrong; it was not laziness in either of them. Anyone who looked at their sallow skin could see that. The matter ended in one of them always sleeping on the floor, where he frequently caught cold.

Meanwhile Haie sits down beside us. He winks at me and rubs his paws thoughtfully. We once spent the finest day of our army-life together—the day before we left for the front. We had been allotted to one of the recently formed regiments, but were first to be sent back for equipment to the garrison, not to the reinforcement depot, of course, but to another barracks. We were due to leave next morning early. In the evening we prepared ourselves to square accounts with Himmelstoss.

We had sworn for weeks past to do this. Kropp had even gone so far as to propose entering the postal service in peacetime in order to be Himmelstoss' superior when he became a postman again. He revelled in the thought of how he would grind him. It was this that made it impossible for him to crush us altogether—we always reckoned that later, at the end of the war, we would have our revenge on him.

In the meantime we decided to give him a good hiding. What could he do to us anyhose if he didn't recognize us and we left early the next morning?

HIMMELSTOSS RUSHED TO A FALL



Himmelstoss was thrown down, he rolled five yards and started to yell. Haie let him get a gasp of air every so often. He would give a mighty yell that was immediately hushed. Then they gave him a severe beating.

Jack Beamer, the only man not in costume, had stolen a red silk sash from someone and tied it around his waist. Nancy had a pair of garnets in her high bubbling head; rose above the music which he changed to something Spanish and lilting; the saxophone was still. Somebody shook a tambourine, Frank Haworth picked up the melody on his guitar.

The other dancers had stopped dancing. Everyone was crowding to watch the couple in the middle of the floor. Jack Beamer threw back his head and laughed. He made an absurdly graceful bow to Nancy. Her bright, bronze head almost touched the floor, she curtsied so low. The castinets clicked, they were dancing. Fandango? Beamer didn't know, he was making it up as he went along, but it didn't matter.

Old Gilbert Neal, Sr., stumping through the ballroom with his wife on his arm, stopped and stared.

"Why word!" he said.

Mrs. Neal fumbled for her lorgnette and focussed it on the breathless, laughing girl.

"A real beauty, eh Myra!"

Mrs. Neal lowered her lorgnette and shook her head. "Yes, and a real tragedy I'm afraid, my dear. She's old Senator Peebles' granddaughter. Kitty, the daughter, married somebody or other—Hollenbeck I think the name is . . . dear, dear . . .

"But a girl like that, Myra! Temperament, style, fire! She'll go far without any help."

"Too far. Did you see Jack Beamer's eyes? Well, it's none of my business. I'm glad all my girls were boys."

The dance was over. There was a roar of applause, and then somebody started a stampede for the buffet.

Jack picked up a velvet wrap someone had left on a chair, and put it over Nancy's bare shoulders.

They slipped out of the open French window by which he had entered an hour ago.

Mat Tully was late. First he had decided not to come, costume parties make a man feel like such a fool. But at the last minute he thought he might as well, and went down to the costumers for something to wear.

"A Venetian costume?" the saleslady repeated helpfully. "I'm afraid—I'm really afraid that about everything is gone. There's a big society affair tonight and so many gentlemen . . . how would you like a nice bull fighter's outfit?"

In the end they fitted him out in dark green tights and a leather jumper studded with orange and yellow.

It was quite a nice costume and Mat rather fancied himself in it, though he had a sneaking suspicion it was intended for Robin Hood, or Peter Pan. Still nobody is fussy about details like that, he consoled himself, driving fast to make up for lost time. Nancy Hollenbeck was back from her long vacation he had heard, and, of course, she'd be there.

He mused about that, bumping along over the highway, in his rattly old car. He had been awfully in love with her last spring. Maybe he was still . . .

She wasn't on the floor when he got there. Half of the crowd had drifted down to the river where the lanterns on the little boats bobbed like fireflies over the water. Some of the more convivial spirits had joined hands around the punch bowl and were singing, "I'm a son of a gun of a sailor—" with great feeling and not too much harmony.

"C'mon, Mat, you've got a beautiful voice!" someone invited, but who can join a chorus of maudlin songsters and—other and fresh from a long, hard ride?

He was turning away, a little disconsolately, when a familiar voice cried. "Why Mat Tully, where did YOU come from?"

It was the oldest Hollenbeck girl, coming toward him with both hands outstretched, welcoming him as if she were really glad to see him, as if it mattered whether he came or not.

"Hello, Lou!" He had never called her that before. Her color deepened. For a moment she looked almost as lovely as her pretty sister. "Gee, it's good to see you! Where's Nancy?"

"Out on the river with the others. Want to go look for her?"

Lou tried to answer gayly nonchalantly, as Nancy would. But she didn't manage it very well. She heard her own voice, too eager, too tense. The old self-consciousness came rushing back, her throat felt right. "I have this dance with someone—" She looked around brightly, nervously. "Let him go look for her, I'll give herself away like that? Rushing up to him like a chattering schoolgirl! Let him go look for Nancy! What did she care? Helen Heffinger was out there waiting for him, looking very fetching in a sandshine in her crimson velvet . . . why keep her waiting?

She smiled. A peculiar expression flitted swiftly across his dark, mobile features.

"You have this dance with me. But we're not going to dance it. We're going to forage for something to eat instead. Nancy won't miss us," he added, laughing.

With Mat, looking like Robin Hood at a party, by her side, Louise led the way to the dining room, where salads and funny heart-shaped sandwiches were laid out on long tables. She walked on air. Her gilt slippers—home gilded—seemed not to touch the ground at all.

"Nancy won't miss us!" Mat had said.

At the moment that he said it, Nancy Hollenbeck, in a canoe with Jack Beamer, would have given anything she possessed to see them. To see anybody. To get away. To be safe, on shore.

Horrors of Periods Behind Lines Relived by Survivor

We knew each pub he used to visit every evening. Returning to the barracks he had to go along a dark, uninhabited road. There we waited for him behind a pile of stones. I had a bed-cover with me. We trembled with suspense, hoping he would be alone. At last we heard his footstep, which we recognized easily, so often had we heard it in the mornings as the door flew open and we bawled: "Get up!"

"Alone?" whispered Kropp.

"Alone."

Himmelstoss seemed a little elevated; he is singing. His belt-buckle gleamed. He came on unsuspectingly.

Given a Beating

We seized the bed-cover, made a quick leap, threw it over his head from behind and pulled it round him so that he stood there in a white sack unable to raise his arms. The singing stopped. The next moment Haie Westhus was there, and spreading out his arms he shoved us back in order to be first in. He put himself in position with evident satisfaction, raised his arm like a signalmast and his hand like a coal-shovel and fetched such a blow on the white sack as would have felled an ox.

Himmelstoss was thrown down, he rolled five yards and started to yell. But we were prepared for that and had brought a cushion. Haie squatted down, laid the cushion on his knees, felt where Himmelstoss' head was and pressed it down on the pillow. Immediately his voice was muffled. Haie let him get a gasp of air every so often, when he would give a mighty yell that was immediately hushed.

Tjaden unbuttoned Himmelstoss' braces and pulled down his trousers, holding the whip meantime in his teeth. Then he stood up and set to work.

It was a wonderful picture; Himmelstoss on the ground, Haie bending over him with a fiendish grin and his mouth wide open with bloodlust. Himmelstoss' head on his knees; then the convulsed, striped drawers, the crossed legs, executing at every blow most original movements in the lowered breeches, and towering over them like a woodcutter the indefatigable Tjaden.

In the end we had to drag him away to get our turn.

Finally Haie stood Himmelstoss on his feet again and gave one last personal remonstrance. As he stretched out his right arm preparatory to giving him a box on the ear he looked as if he were going to reach down a star.

Himmelstoss staggered. Haie stood him up agaip, made ready and fetched him a second well-aimed beauty with the left hand. Himmelstoss yelled and fell down on all fours cursing.

We disappeared at full speed.

Haie looked around once again and said wrathfully, satisfied and rather mysteriously:

"Revenge is black-pudding."

Himmelstoss ought to have been pleased; his saying that we should each educate one another had borne fruit for himself. We had become successful students of his methods.

He never discovered whom he had to thank for the business. At any rate he scored a bed-cover out of it for when we returned after a few hours later to look for it, it was no longer to be found.

That evening's work made us more or less content to leave next morning. And an old buffer was pleased to describe us as 'young heroes."

FOREST LOVE

by Hazel Livingston

What Has Gone Before

Nancy Hollenbeck gives up Mat Tully at her mother's request because he is poor. She encourages the attentions of Jack Beamer, wealthy married man, who, enamored of Nancy, wishes to divorce his wife. On a mountain trip, Nancy falls in love with a handsome ranger, Roger Decatur. Nancy secretly marries Roger. Doubts assail her as she spends long, lonely days in his rough mountain cabin. She calls on Mrs. McKimmons, a neighboring ranger's wife. Nancy is troubled as she pictures herself growing to be like her. When Roge tries to leave on a long trip, Nancy begs him not to go. Unable to bear the rough shack without him, she packs her belongings and returns home. At the rich Neal's costume ball, Nancy longs for Roger. Then she sees a man rushing toward her.

(Now Go On With the Story)

CHAPTER 24

"THE moon belongs to everyone,

"The best things in life are free!"

The dancers were singing. Even Louise. Even Louise's partner, whose toe, he was quite sure, was broken. For you can't make a scene at a party, even if your sister is making a fool of herself, or your tenderest toe has been trod on.

"He has his nerve," May Belle giggled, whirling by with Gil Neal. "Mother took particular pains not to invite him."

"Oh that's Jack Beamer all over," Gil said easily. "He goes wherever he wants to, invited or not. Rather a compliment that he came. Means he heard it was going to be a good party."

"Good party nothing!" May Belle returned with a touch of her mother's tartness.

"He heard Nancy Hollenbeck was going to be here, that's all. Didn't you see him jump over the dahlia bed and climb in the French window when he saw her? He gives me a pain!"

Gil Neal happy to have May Belle in his arms, happy that everyone, even the blase Beamer, seemed to be having a good time, just laughed. "Gee, May, don't pick on him. There are lots of fellows here who aren't invited. It would be a frost if a mob didn't come!"

"Well—" May Belle admitted grudgingly. It WAS nice to be able to say Jack Beamer came, even if mother WOULD have a fit.

What really upset her was Nancy. You could never depend on Nancy Hollenbeck to keep her place. You asked her partly because you had to, and partly because she was good at keeping people amused. And just when you were feeling really grateful to her for brightening up a dull corner and making things move, she'd, like as not, spoil everything by stealing the best man and hogging the spotlight.

Of course, Gil is the best man! May Belle reassured herself loyally, but just the same, Jack Beamer is the most showy, and I don't think it's very good taste for her to make herself conspicuous like that at MY party!

Gil followed her indignant gaze. Jack Beamer, the only man not in costume, had stolen a red silk sash from someone and tied it around his waist. Nancy had a pair of garnets in her high bubbling head; rose above the music which he changed to something Spanish and lilting; the saxophone was still. Somebody shook a tambourine, Frank Haworth picked up the melody on his guitar.

The Right Place -:- Story by Alfred I. Tooke

"Handsome young lady, wealthy, wishes to correspond with unattached young man under 28 with view to matrimony. College graduate preferred. Must be of good habits, fond of music and dancing, and preferably have stocks and bonds experience. Send photo to Box B-14, Times."

THERE it was in the "Personals," sandwiched between an announcement that Evelyn never wanted to see Johnny again, and a request for papa to come home at once.

Billy Wilson read it over again slowly, weighing each word carefully before he passed on to the next. "Handsome — young — lady — wealthy—" So far so good. The job was made to order. Billy was a college graduate, 25, played the ukulele and saxophone, and had no habits that he called bad. He had worked for nearly 15 months as a stock and bond clerk in New York. Moreover, he was unattached in more senses than one, having lost his job and his girl a day or two previously.

With painstaking care Billy ruined two dozen sheets of stationery, with a result that was a masterpiece in the art of letter writing. He enclosed copies of recent references, and some of his best photos, and delivered the package in person to Box B-14, Times.

For three nights and two days he dreamed of the "handsome young lady, wealthy," whom he was to marry, and on the following morning his eager wait for mail was rewarded with a pale mauve envelope that carried with it a lingering fragrance of violets.

"My Dear Mr. Wilson,"—the letter read—"please pardon my delay in answering your charming letter.

"Your photos positively thrilled me, and I would like to know more about you and your family.

"I live in a large house on the Boldon rd., a short distance from Boldon. The grounds are extensive and overlook a fine golf course and the sea. There is a splendid bathing beach at the foot of the hill. If you happen to like yachting I have a small but very seaworthy yacht in the harbor."

"Won't you call and see me—say on Saturday afternoon of this week, so that we may become better acquainted? Sincerely,

"MIRABEL MARDSEN."

"Mirabel Mardsen! Sounds like a nickname!" commented Billy. "She sure writes a swell letter. Well, this is one time Old Man Opportunity knocked on my door, and I've got him by the whiskers. Boldon—let's see, that's about 30 miles out. Swell locality, too!"

Billy returned to his hotel for lunch, and decided that his funds would just permit a taxi.

"Windermere House, Boldon rd.," he said loftily, and then, with the fascination that a taxicab meter always held for him, he watched the dimes tick off until the driver stopped with a curt, "Here you are, sir! Shall I wait?"

"No!" said Billy. "I shall probably be here quite a while!"

For some reason known to himself the driver smiled—and drove slowly away.

Billy pressed a push button that decorated the center of the lodge-keeper's door, and the door opened with disconcerting suddenness.

"Want to see someone?" a burly Goliath demanded.

"Er—er—I'm looking for Miss Mirabel Mardsen," stammered Billy.

"Ha!" responded the lodgekeeper. "The young lady of fabulous beauty and immense wealth who wishes you to marry her—am I right?"

"Why—yes!" gasped Billy. "Did she tell you that?"

"No!" said Goliath, with a short laugh, "but you're the third young fellow today that's come here looking for her. The other two told me!"

"So there are others!" said Billy. "Er—was Miss Mardsen satisfied with one of them? Possibly if I came in, and—"

"Sure, you better come in!" replied the lodgekeeper. "You came to the right place, there's no doubt about that!" Jerking his thumb toward the other side of the entrance gates, he directed Billy's attention to a sign the latter had not noticed. It read:

A Fortunate Ex-Kaiser

$150,000,000 Is Real Money

(Copyright, 1929)

Germany's "Who's Who" of millionaires says the former Kaiser is the richest man in Germany, his fortune over $150,000,000.

Starting with the avowed intention of hanging him, the Allies and the people whom he led to defeat have not even taken his gigantic fortune.

The Age of 'Frozen Agony'

It might not be a bad idea for someone with good taste to get out a book telling architects what not to do.

Or, perhaps the architects are not to blame. Perhaps the hit-and-run builders are the offenders. But, nevertheless, there are too many terrifying houses with waffle stucco effects, and hideous jazz plaster tricks, and murderous color clashes.

In a few years our sons and daughters and grandchildren will wag their heads in sad perplexity. They will be puzzled by so much frozen agony.

Admirable Taxi Driver

There is something quite admirable about the modern taxicab driver.

He tunes himself to the terrific tempo of metropolitan traffic and thumbs his nose at all the laws of mathematics. He defies physics. His nerves are serene.

He proves something or other to the credit of the age—we don't know just what.

Sane World Monotonous

Moses Greer of Zumbro Falls, Minn., has forty direct descendants. They recently held a reunion. And it was revealed that none of them has ever used tobacco or coffee.

It is all very well for the Greers to thus quietly follow [illegible] except they choose. Just so they do not try to make the rest of us conform to their particular strait-jacket of sanity.

Because an entirely sane and cautious world would be very monotonous.

An Admirer of Jazz

Edward Gordon Craig, Britisher—son of Ellen Terry—is coming to America to lecture. And he is an admirer of jazz.

Englishmen sometimes have a charming way of cheering for things Americans are inclined to be ashamed of.

Jazz has humor. Jazz is a logical symptom of a nervous [illegible]

It is one of the things that probably ought to be the matter with us. And, come to think of it, it is!

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I WAS very tired last night and couldn't sleep well. Along about two I left my tent and stood for a while under the great pines, looking up at the stars.

It was a hollow, hot night but the silence was quick with forest loveliness. There was a scampering and scuttling through the pine needles, a tapping in the bark, the whirring of an owl above the old road, the yammering bark of a coyote, hunting in the chaparral.

By night, as by day, the business of the forest went on and though it all one felt, rather than heard, the faint throbbing roar of the power plant.

The power plant is miles away from the hills. I have never seen it, but as I ride about the country I see its mark. New lights twinkle in lonely cabins—a pump worked down by the creek lifting water for irrigation. Slowly but surely the power is working its way through the wilderness, changing the lives of the people, giving them new force and freedom.

Always, if you listen, you can catch that distant roar. Through the calm of the hot summer days, through the crack and whine of the frozen winter nights, it sounds. Somewhere the plant is there, generating force, giving out energy and light. Strange, that tremendous, unseen presence, hidden there.

I thought of these things as I stood looking at the stars, listening to the roar. And then, as one will, I thought of God.

The older I grow, the less I know about God and the more I think about Him. Sometimes, of course, seeing the horrors of life, I have given up hope that there is such a thing as God. But always I have come back to that hope. Always something has brought me back, something slight in itself, but as significant as that pulsing roar.

Brave deeds that lift us up above the low level of our cowardice—loving service, cleaving our jungle cruelty—

Noble sacrifice, surmounting animal selfishness—

Courage and love, beauty and nobility, pouring out from some unseen source, penetrating the darkness, changing the wilderness, giving us new force and freedom.

Where do they come from? I do not know. But there they are. Proofs. Proofs of—something. As the light in the cabin is a proof. As the pump at the creek is a proof.

PROOF OF A SOURCE—SOMEWHERE.

Somewhere in the darkness — Power.

Somewhere in the darkness — GOD!

ONCE-OVERS

Are you a thoughtless man in whatever you do?

Is your daily work mechanical, rambling here and there in your efforts?

If a golf player, do you lunge in your efforts to hit the ball?

Your golf results should prove to you what your efforts will bring along other lines unless you alter your natural method.

You know that rhythm and concentration are necessary to best results in golf, so why not try rhythm and concentration in your daily work.

Your bad habit of rushing and stabbing at what you do is one that can get you into a lot of trouble.

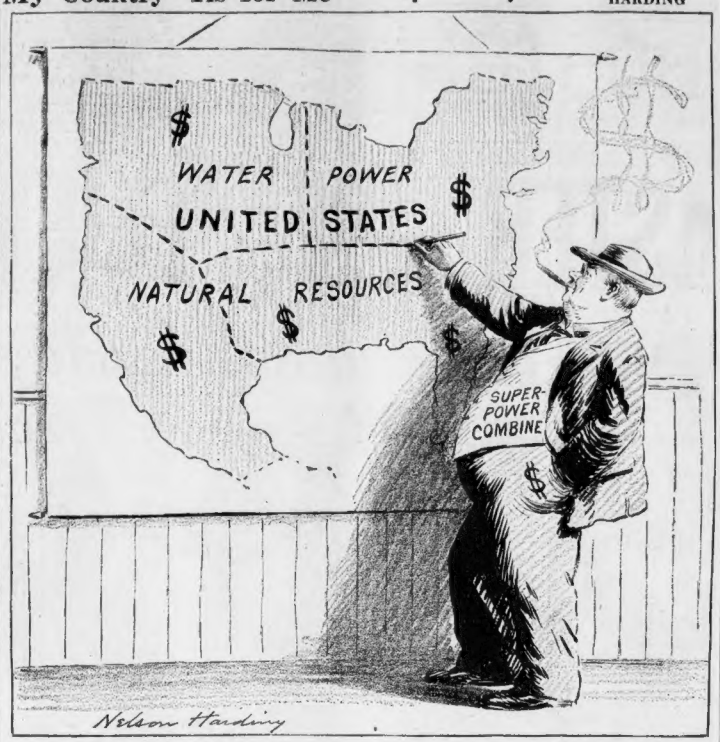
You may turn out considerable work by this process, but very likely there is as much to offset the advantage you think you have gained.

You'll accomplish more in your life and be happier if you train yourself to be rhythmic and positive in work and play.

It may be a struggle to do this, but you will find the result will be worth the effort.

My Country 'Tis for Me

By NELSON HARDING



Without consulting you or me,
This merry one is making free
With maps of our United States,
On which he calmly indicates

Just how the country shall be split
In sections, for his benefit.
And how the People's property
Shall be a Trust Monopoly.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

THERE are times when a man is an absolute necessity in a woman's life, and other times when he is just excess baggage, astonished as he would be to know it.

Next to having a husband miles away when he should be at home, nothing so tries a woman's soul as having him hanging around the house when he should be far away—at the office or the shop or on the golf links.

Alas, if a man could only be REGULATED, like a clock, or turned on or off like the radio or the electric lights, how much sweeter married life would be! Or if he were any like a well-bed, right at hand when a woman needed him, but NOT perpetually under foot at inconvenient moments.

You know what I mean. For instance, a husband is something a woman wants above all things when she is giving a dinner party. She wants him right in the foreground, to serve as a table decoration, to act as a buffer between her and the guests, to mix the drinks, pass the cigars, adorn the drawing room, play the role of perfect host and give tone and eclat to the whole affair.

But when he blows in unexpectedly right in the middle of her afternoon bridge party, he is about as welcome as bad news or a returned manuscript or an installment collector.

There is nothing so welcome as a man around the house when the furniture has to be moved, the draperies have to be put up or taken down, the porch swing has to be assembled for the summer or the furnace to be started for the winter.

Nobody can be HIRED to do these things with any real zest and enthusiasm. It takes the heart and hand of a thorough-going "husband."

A wise husband will show up promptly and cheerfully on the sixteenth on Saturday for the week-end at the summer resort, and never embarrass his hitter-half by a non-appearance which she is at a loss to explain. Never does a husband seem more necessary than at this time, when every woman is producing in the form of a masculine background.

But never will he stay over after all the other men have gone back to the city and embarrass his wife by looking like a sheik in a harem.

Oh, yes; there is a time and a place for everything—particularly for a husband. But the man who is always in the right place at the right time has yet to be born. And how they DO love to hang around when they are not wanted and are only cluttering up the house. Just masculine perversity!

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

THE 18-day diet consists mostly of making three-cushion caroms with a set of olives and a grapefruit for a cue ball.

But the way that diet swept the country, like a new broom in the hands of an epileptic janitor, proves that we are a nation of fads and faddists.

All we need is a bell-cow, and we follow the jingle of silly chimes like coal pouring down the chute.

Although Beau Brummel once had England wearing vests that looked like wall-paper in a damp cellar, fads are not confined to the English speaking publics.

A fad of orchids once ruined the usually reliable folk of Holland. The lumber-footed burghers gave farms, fortunes and rebates for the spasmodic looking blooms.

Give us a good press agent and a fractional fad and, inside of three weeks we will have the world growing beards for the export trade.

If Ethel Barrymore can start the dieting industry then there is no reason why Ambassador Charley Dawes cannot have everybody refusing to wear pants.

Dawes refused to wear pants for King George. Suppose Charley cabled the Senate: "I won't wear trousers for you, either."

That would start a fad that might result in a war between the pantless nations and the best-dressed men of next winter.

Is there any reason why we shouldn't start collecting polka dots on all sizes and colors? Suppose Clara Bow had a picture taken in an orchard of polka dots?

All the ladies in the land would immediately wear lavalieres of inkspots. They would carry bouquets of egg-stained picnic plates.

This fad would only run a month or two. But it would have the world dizzier than a left-handed cobbler trying to vulcanize a rubber heel.

At present, there is a gin fad raging through the land. People think it is ultra-cosmoline to take a snorter of gin and then blow soap bubbles through their ears.

By next October, the shooting fad will be over. Then the boys will go in for Du Pont pineapples and Krupp banjos.

We admire the man who can stay sensible when all these fads are swamping America. He is missing a lot of fun and the chance to have his memory perpetuated to posterity and the opportunity to have his valor rewarded by the Congressional animal cracker.

The Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

The ardent youth, the joyous bride
Sit there and gaze as long ago
The day they wed, they sat just so
And looked into the future years
So filled with good, so free from fears.

Her skirts fall, billowing about
Her feet; bright curls are peeping out
Beneath her bonnet's narrow brim;
Demure, her upward glances at him.
A ruffled shirt, a flowered vest
Adorn his throbbing, love-filled breast.

How dared old Time to use you so?
How dared he steal your strength and bloom,
Youth's evanescent, rare perfume?
Yet, though all else is dim and strange,
Not Time himself your love could change;
Still, though youth's ardors long have died,
You face life gladly, side by side.

The Great White Lama

Notice His Cunning Little Toes

(Copyright, 1929)

A MONGOLIAN BABY REVERED BY MILLIONS, AND EVIDENTLY PUZZLED

In the great Buddhist monastery of Usersky-Dazan in the mountains of Thibet, this little baby lives, eats his porridge, drinks his milk from the yak, a long-haired tamed buffalo, while monks of the Buddhist monastery wait upon him, bow down before him, ring little bells in his honor, wave incense in front of him. Great crowds worship him as a divine being.

He is accepted as the "Great Immortal White Lama," because he was born in the hour of his predecessor's death.

When the Great White Lama dies, as this little boy will die sooner or later, the priests in charge of him, who also keeps track of births, select some baby brought into the world just as the White Lama went out of it. Believing in reincarnation, they think the soul of the Great White Lama descended into the baby. The baby in turn is worshipped, and takes the place of the White Lama just dead.

And so it goes, in the land of benighted superstition, where a third of the population are Buddhist monks, conveniently dodging real work, while two-thirds of the population support them and contribute to the very modest desires of this baby.

What interests modern sciences—we call the attention of Mr. Henry Fairfield Osborne, head of the Museum of Natural History, to it—is the fascinating way in which this child seizes the big toe of his right foot, with the big and second toe of his left foot.

Everybody knows that, according to evolutionists, in babyhood the child's foot is different from that of its monkey-like ancestors whose feet are able to pick up objects with ease.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. M'INTYRE

LOS ANGELES, July 18—This is The City They Tried to Laugh Off.

I've heard sniggerers dub it everything from an overgrown country town to the capital of Iowa. For years the general impression was that its activities consisted of retired yaps from the corn belt rocking themselves goofy on front porches.

Los Angeles peeked from its shell an ordinary civic chick. And before the populace realized it, became a full grown ostrich. Then and before the populace realized it, became a full grown ostrich. There is no explaining the municipal monstrosity. But there it stands threatening shortly to become one of the three largest cities in America.

I know of no city—save perhaps New York—the target for so much ridicule and yet every year I find it has outgrown its clothes and is in new architectural dress. Manhattan's skylines make no quicker shifts. It presents an odd blending of the cosmopolite and the yokel, the village and the metropolis.

In the crowds waiting for the train at the station I noticed a gentleman in pearl gray derby with a mongoled eye screwed into an owlish stare. He was bespatted and boutonnieted and might have just stepped out of the Savoy for a stroll along The Strand.

Close by was as near the comic paper pastel of the harvest as one would ever see in real life. Meadow larks might well be nesting in the luxurious foliage that almost reached his waist. One would have to go far back in the Arkansas hills to find a hill billy to match him.

Along its streets one may see an old desert hermit munching peanuts from a butcher paper cornucopia alongside a handsome movie she-ik admiring himself in a window mirror. The tiniest hamlet at the cross roads cannot produce more pronounced rustic types than Pershing sq.

Nor will Fifth ave. at its gaudiest hour present a greater cosmopolitan flair than the flow of pedestrianic traffic along the main shopping arteries. These are the visual contradictions that always meet the eye. They astound the visitor as much, I believe, as the native. He is still bewildered.

Movie moguls trekking westward to their studios disembark at San Fernandino. Here their block-long cars with liveried attendants meet and bowl them off to their Spanish castles with flaming awnings and a patio in the cool Beverley canyons. Two I saw depart in this fashion were men who less than 30 years ago got their first glimpse of America through a porthole in the steerage. They still speak broken English, and if that doesn't typify American opportunity—you think up one.

There is another custom of its fledgling days in which Los Angeles clings. It "meets the trains." Young girls in fresh organdies along with the white flannelled, hatless lads stroll down to see the transcontinental expresses arrive. Not one puffs in without its quota of celebs—mostly of the cinema world. No city its size entertains so many notables nor is any city so provincial in its curiosity about them.

Greta Garbo walking along a Los Angeles street receives more frank staring than she would receive in, say, Dayton, O., and so pronounced is the celebrity complex in Hollywood, of all places, business would likely come to a full stop.

I mention Miss Garbo merely because she seems to be leading the pack in popularity at the moment. But ere this reaches print she may be one of the Back Numbers. Famfugits out here and that tomorrow's spotlight may single out an obscurity of today for a quick whisk to fame is what makes this community tick with romance.
